Former Premier William Andrew Cecil Bennett, the man who changed the face of his adopted British Columbia, died in his sleep in Kelowna Friday night at the age of 78.

He had been in hospital since Feb. 9.

Jon Arnett, press secretary to Bill Bennett, the current B.C. premier and son of W.A.C. Bennett, said Bennett's wife May, daughter Anita Tozer and son R. J. Bennett were at his bedside when his heart failed at 10:30 p.m. at Kelowna General Hospital.

Premier Bennett flew home from Vancouver this morning.

Bennett said that his father had led B.C. through its greatest period of expansion in both the interior and the North.

"He had the vision, and he took his vision and made things happen," the premier said.

Simultaneous memorial services will be held in Kelowna at the First United Church and in Victoria at the Metropolitan United Church, 1411 Quadra, at 2 p.m. Tuesday.

Rev. Dr. A.E. King will officiate at the Victoria service and Rev. Dr. Clyde Woollard in Kelowna.

Cremation will follow.

Originally a New Brunswick farm boy who burned Liberals in effigy, W.A.C. Bennett served as premier of B:.C. for 20 years, the longest unbroken tenure in the province's history.

Lasting Mark on B.C. . . .

British Columbians will be able to register their sympathy over former premier W.A.C. Bennett's death in a book of condolences to be placed in the rotunda of the Legislative Buildings for an indefinite period starting Monday.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis also said arrangements are being made to hold a memorial service in Victoria next week following the family's funeral services.

Curtis joined other leading British Columbians in praising Bennett as a person of vision and courage who left a lasting mark on the province.

He said Bennett touched the lives of everyone.

"As with so many other younger British Columbians, he influenced my life indirectly . . . certainly he intensified my interest in politics."

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said B.C. has lost a great citizen.

"He will be missed. It is the passing of an era. It was a time when politics were very close to every corner of this province.

"I hope that every citizen recognizes the great contribution he made to this province."

Progressive Conservative leader Vic Stephen called Bennett's death a great loss.

Former Tory leader Dr. Scott Wallace said Bennett was "the right man at the right time."

"There is no question he was a man of outstanding capacity, foresight and tremendous determination to follow his own commitments and feelings of what he believed was right for B.C."

Gordon Shrum, former co-chairman of B.C. Hydro, called Bennett one of the "most courageous and imaginative political leaders I have ever known.

"It will be a long while before we have another man of his particular qualities as a political leader in Canada."

Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, Shrum's Hydro partner, praised Bennett for his far-sighted policies.

"He did as much as anybody in our history to open up the hinterland of the province."

He said Bennett's insistence on a two-river hydro power scheme has proven to be, despite all the criticism over the years, the right decision and one from which B.C. will reap enormous benefits for decades to come.

Long-time colleague Waldo Skillings, former trade and industry minister, said he had lost a wonderful friend, and said the contributions Bennett made will last for years.

"He brought B.C. from a have-not province to one of the foremost provinces in Canada."

Former Victoria mayor Peter Pollen called Bennett "one of the greatest, if not the greatest political figure in B.C.'s history."

Fatal Blast Rips N.S. Coal Mine

GLACE BAY, N.S. (CP) — An unexplained explosion in the most productive area of the Cape Breton Development Corp.'s (Devco) big No. 26 Colliery here killed 10 coal miners and injured six others early this morning.

About 150 other men working the overnight shift in the coal mine were uninjured.

Names of the dead and injured were withheld by Devco officials.

The six injured men were all taken to a special burns unit at the Victoria General Hospital in Halifax, 450 kilometres south of this town of 25,000.

Some of those taken to Halifax were said to be in serious condition, and an ambulance driver said one of the miners had burns to more than 90 per cent of his body.

Devco President Steve Rankin, visibly shaken by the worst accident in a Glace Bay mine since the Crown corporation took over the coal mines from private industry 10 years ago, said the cause of the explosion was not known.

Devco said there had been no unusual build-up of methane gas in the mine prior to the explosion, which erupted in an area known as No. 12 South Wall at about 1 a.m. PST.

Roy MacLean, Devco's director of mine planning, said this section of No. 26 Colliery had been the mine's most productive area in the last six months.

MacLean said the mine likely would resume production Monday.

In terms of lives, the accident was the worst in a Glace Bay coal mine in this century. An accident in old No. 4 Colliery in 1899 killed 11 miners.

Rankin said the explosion followed an 'ignition of unknown cause".

The 16 dead and injured men were the only ones working in the immediate area at the time.

Price of Food Up 21% in Year

OTTAWA (CP) — Hefty increases in the price of beef, flour and fresh produce pushed food prices up 3.1 per cent in the four-week period ended Feb. 15, the Anti-Inflation Board reported Friday.

The board said the survey of supermarket prices in 12 cities showed food prices now are 21 per cent higher than a year ago, the highest annual increase since the index was created in 1974.

The board said the average price for a nutritious diet for a family of four jumped to $58.84 in mid-February, up $1.80 from the January level and $8.30 higher than February, 1978.

The 21-per-cent increase in the board's food basket compares with a 14.1-percent annual increase in food. prices shown in the January consumer price index issued by Statistics Canada.

Am AIB spokesman said the difference is a result of Statistics Canada changing the weighting of foods in its index last year. The board uses the old index.

The board said beef prices jumped 9.7 per cent in the month, 62.6 per cent above prices a year earlier.

Fresh fruit jumped 5.6 per cent in the month and prices of fresh vegetable were up 4.6 per cent, the board said.

"Prices for fresh produce vary sharply as sources or supply shift and as weather conditions change," the board said. "Orange, apple, grapefruit, carrots and cabbage were among the items showing significant price rises."

Lettuce dropped slightly while pootatoes and apples — which have among the heaviest weights in the index — showed only minor price changes.

The board said cereal and bakery products prices rose 1.9 per cent during the month and were up 16.4 per cent over a year earlier.

The board said poultry prices rose .9 per cent during the latest month and were up 33.5 per cent from a year earlier. Chicken was up 1.4 per cent because of increased consumer demand in he face of rapidly-rising beef prices.

The survey showed prices of processed fruit were up 2.1 per cent last month, up 34.3 per cent for the year. Fish was up 3.4 per cent for the month, 12.4 per cent for the year.

Dairy products rose .7 per cent during the month, up 7.8 per cent over the year and eggs rose .5 per cent to prices 8.8 per-cent higher than a year earlier.

Pork prices were up .9 per cent for the month and were up 10.9 per cent from a year earlier. The board said increased demand for pork had pushed up prices.

Beverage prices rose only .3 per cent during the month and were 2.2 per cent lower than a year ago mainly because of drops in coffee and tea prices.

More 'Punishment' For Vietnam: China

Times News Services

Tank-led Chinese forces, firing the most intense artillery barrages in the history of Indo-Chinese warfare, were reported today to have driven 20 miles into Vietnam. But intelligence sources said counterattacking Vietnamese may have pushed the Chinese back at some points.

Intelligence sources in Bangkok said the Chinese invaders had captured at least four provincial capitals along the 450-mile border. A Japanese report said a fifth captial had fallen, but the Vietnamese denied this.

At the same time a Peking official quoted by a Japanese news dispatch said Chinese forces — once they finished "punishing" Vietnam — would pull back to the border recognized only by Peking and not by Hanoi.

Kyodo news service quoted the official, whose name was withheld, as saying "the border line to which the Chinese forces would pull out is the one recognized by China, not the border claimed by the Vietnamese."

The official ruled out the possibility that the Chinese would withdraw from Vietnamese territory "today or tomorrow," the dispatch said. He added that "Vietnam should receive punishment for a little more time."

The official's statement indicated that the Sino-Vietnamese war would drag on as Hanoi would not accept a demarcation line drawn by Peking, Kyodo said.

Newsmen familiar with Indochina warfare and weaponry in recent years agreed the Chinese artillery barrage on the northwestern village of Dung Ho alone hit a rate of at least a round every second for long spurts Friday.

In Moscow, Defense Minister Dmitry Ustinov said Friday that Moscow's warning to China to stop before "it is too late" should not be taken lightly and cautioned that Soviet armed forces are combat-ready.

But the Kremlin still has failed to indicate what if anything it proposes to do to counter the Chinese action.

Moscow has not even acknowledged reports from Washington that the Soviet Union has stepped up deliveries of military supplies to Vietnam, with the departure Friday of six AN-22 transport planes for Hanoi.

At the United Nations, western and non-aligned members of the UN Security Council are looking for an acceptable formula that would halt the fighting in Indochina and use the good offices of the secretary-general to set up a peace mission.

Canada asked to be heard in the council debate today.

Bomb Alert In Britain After Blasts

YEOVIL, England (Reuter) — England went on a bomb alert today after blasts shattered the peace of this western country town and Irish republican guerrillas said they were responsible.

Four persons were injured, one severely, when the first blast came without warning in a crowded Woolworth store. As shoppers fled into the streets, another bomb, planted in a parked van, rocked the area.

That blast caused no injuries but turned the van, in a town centre parking lot, into a heap of smouldering metal.

Army experts destroyed two more devices with controlled explosions and defused a third planted in a supermarket.

In Dublin, spokesmen for the violent Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) phoned newspapers and said republican guerrillas were responsible for the attack.

Police here said a man in his 20s has been detained in connection with the blasts.

The blasts came hours after Roy Mason, minister in charge of Northern Ireland, warned that the IRA might be planning a new bombing campaign in Ulster.

Last month, police arrested a dozen men after IRA attacks on the British mainland in which bombs exploded in hired cars in London and a big gas-storage tank was blown up southeast of the capital.

There is no indication why the bombers chose this sleepy Somerset town for their attack. But recently security has been greatly stepped up in London and there was speculation the IRA would look for softer targets.

Police throughout the country have been put on alert this weekend in case of further attacks.

$100-a-Week Raises To Senior Bureaucrats

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans to give 2,000 senior civil servants pay raises of up to $100 a week — to a top range of $78,700 a year.

In a news release delivered Friday at the close of business, the federal treasury board said executive-level bureaucrats would receive seven-per-cent pay increases this year.

That boosts the maximum pay to deputy ministers by about $100 a week to $1,500 weekly. Minimums at the lowest executive level would increase about $42 to about $650 a week.

The government said it had considered a recommendation from an outside advisory group for a 7.5-percent increase in salaries but decided on seven per cent because "current economic circumstances required continued restraint."

Last year, the government said it expected wage increases in the private sector not to exceed six per cent.

Prime Minister Trudeau this year received a 6.4-percent pay increase — as did all MPs — bringing his salary to $76,700 annually. Governor-General Edward Schreyer receives $48,000 while Opposition Leader Joe Clark and cabinet ministers get $62,500.

Wage Hike Headline Clarified

In the headline of the main front page story in Friday's Times, the reference to "56 per cent wage hikes" was not clear to some readers.

To clarify, the figure was based on the third and fourth paragraphs of the story which referred to average weekly industrial wages rising virtually twice as fast as profits which had risen 28.7 per cent in the same period. The 56 per cent figure was not given specifically in the story as it should have been.

Welfare Budget Overspent

The provincial human resources ministry has overspent its budget by $36 million, a spokesman said Friday.

The spokesman said $32 million of the excess was spent on welfare and $4 million on the Guaranteed Annual Income for Need program for senior citizens and the handicapped.

Earlier this week, Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy disclosed her welfare budget for the coming year had been increased by $31 million — $5 million less than will have been spent during the current year which ends March 31.

Opposition party members said the $36 million — transferred on special warrant from general revenue by cabinet order-in-council Friday — represents "yet another overrun" on the government's budget for income assistance programs.

upset defeat by the New Democratic Party. That loss was avenged three years later when Bill was swept to office.

Bennett, a former Conservative whose smile was his trademark, virtually built the provincial Social Credit party singlehandedly in the early 1950s.

Before he entered politics, Bennett built up a chain of hardware stores bearing his name in the interior B.C. communities of Kelowna, Kamloops, Vernon and Penticton. After he retired, he went back into the business by minding the Kelowna store.

Bennett's political career was dominated by what he called a "great and holy crusade against socialism."

He took part at first in the disastrous coalition between the Liberal and Conservative parties in the late 1940s and when that government collapsed, was a leading figure in the stunning Social Credit victory of 1952.

In the 1952 election he kept the old Co-operative Commonwealth Federation (CCF), the forerunner of the NDP, from forming a minority government by the bare margin of one seat.

But Bennett was not a dyed-in-the-wool follower of the Social Credit monetary policies that William Aberhart had earlier tried to implement in Alberta.

He borrowed his political philosophy, although basically conservative, from a variety of sources, even nationalizing the electric power industry in the province.

Avalanche Kills Skier; 3 Escape

REVELSTOKE (CP) — Rick Straka, 19, of Edmonton, was killed Friday in an avalanche on Mount McKenzie near this southeastern British Columbia community.

RCMP said four skiers, two from Edmonton and two from Revelstoke, were flown into the area by helicopter and were traversing the hill when the slide occurrred about 9:30 a.m. PST.

Three of them managed to ski out of the way but Strata fell.

sharpest increase in food prices in nine months, the cost of living jumped another 0.9 per cent in January while the purchasing power of the average worker declined.

The 0.9-per-cent rise in the labor department's consumer price index matched the highest monthly increases recorded last year but fell short of the one per cent rise that many analysts had predicted for January.

The increase, also marked by rising prices for gasoline, cars, medical care and public accommodations, would amount to an annual inflation rate of 12 per cent if continued for an entire year.

We Need Help!

Most of us are not intentionally brutal. Why then do we in B.C. continue to allow close to 200,000 wild creatures to be tortured every year in leg-hold and other cruel traps? The B.C. Government, who alone have the power to declare a ban, are apparently indifferent. We must force them to show mercy. Will you help? Seatbelt Lack Cuts Award to Widow

VANCOUVER — The widow of a man killed in a three-car crash on the Port Mann bridge in February, 1977, will lose part of a $128,000 British Columbia Supreme Court award because her husband was not wearing a seatbelt. Madam Justice Patricia Proudfoot ruled that Tirath Thind contributed to his own death and she reduced the award by 15 per cent to $108,800. Thind was a passenger in the back seat of the vehicle at the time of the crash.

ABU DHABI — Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip arrived here today on a three-day state visit to the United Arab Emirates. This is the next-to-last leg of their three-week tour of the Persian Gulf.

MIAMI — Jerry Saslaw, 33, was resigned to losing his chest hair just to take a stress test for a firefighter's job. But that was before he met a 27-year-old stewardess who told him his hairy pectorals "turned her on." So, for the sake of his love life, Saslaw refused to take the stress test required of all firefighters on active duty, and is being moved to a desk job. The test would have meant shaving off eight postage-stamp-size circles of chest hair.

WASHINGTON — U.S. Marine Sgt. Kenneth Kraus, the wounded U.S. Embassy guard held for a week by Iranian revolutionaries, came home to a hero's welcome Friday and said: "I did the job I was paid to do and . . . I'm glad that it worked out." Kraus, 22, was met by the marine corps commandant, the navy secretary, two senators, his family, a band and 80 marines.

LOS ANGELES — Michelle Triola Marvin said she wanted to change her name to Marvin because she was going to Japan where she would meet the royal family and didn't want the Emperor "to think I'm a hooker," a witness testified at the property settlement trial Friday. The witness — James Mahoney, actor Lee Marvin's long-time public relations man — said Michelle had told him she and Lee Marvin were going to Japan for the premiere of Hell in the Pacific.

DELTA — Delta Mayor Tom Goode says he will soon meet with his creditors to discuss his proposal to pay $300,000 during a two-year period on guarantees of about $2 million. In his proposal, filed under the Bankruptcy Act, Goode listed contingent debts of $2,828,000 and assets of $30,000.

Goode, 45, a former Liberal MP, has told creditors his companies have lost considerable money because of falling land prices.

NOW 53, Christine Jorgenson recalls her sex-change operation 27 years ago in Denmark, without which she says she would have killed herself.

W.A.C. Bennett

It is really too soon to write the final words about W.A.C. Bennett. Although he had been in failing health for a year, his death still comes as a shock to every British Columbian. And, in what is perhaps as fine a tribute as a man can have, virtually every British Columbian feels a sense of loss at his passing.

Even those who were his most bitter political enemies for 20 years — perhaps especially those who were his most bitter political enemies — remember today his triumphs and successes, his strengths and achievements.

They remember that he had a broad, exciting vision of what British Columbia could become, a vision that encompassed the Interior and the North as they had never been seen before.

They remember that to turn that vision into reality, he undertook a remarkable program of development, construction of bridges and highways, extension of the B.C. Railway into the far-flung reaches of the north.

They remember that he was never afraid to take bold, imaginative steps when he was convinced they were necessary — establishment of B.C. Ferries, nationalization of B.C. Electric, the two-rivers power development policy.

They remember that despite the criticisms that he wrote provincial budgets on the back of envelopes, he managed to eliminate the B.C. government's direct debt, at a time when Ottawa and other provinces were building up larger and larger deficits.

They remember that he succeeded in almost singlehandedly building the Social Credit party from a handful of disgruntled Conservatives to what amounted to a dynasty and that he stayed in office as premier longer than anyone else in the province's history.

Most of all, perhaps, they remember him as a man who loved British Columbia and believed in it, who loved the democratic political process and believed in it.

The reality wasn't that rosy, of course. Bennett was as human as the rest of us — he made mistakes, had failures, sometimes acted out of weakness instead of out of strength.

In time, no doubt, historians and observers will put together an analysis of the Bennett years more balanced than either the political criticism that hounded him in his years in office or the tributes that are pouring in today.

What will not change, however, will be the essential premise that W.A.C. Bennett was one of the greatest leaders, politicians and builders of B.C., and a man who will be sorely missed.

Truth in Travelling

Tired of travel agents who advertise "sun-kissed, romantic island vacations" but neglect to tell you that the beach is a half-hour hike from your hotel, the mosquitoes are murderous and a plain meal will set you back $25?

A London tour company has not only decided that honesty is the best policy, but has also discovered that it pays quite well. Customers quite like Sunmed's frank, witty and deprecating descriptions of its holiday destinations in the Greek islands. It recorded complaints from only 1.8 per cent of its customers, and a significant number of these even rebooked with Sunmed.

But with brochure descriptions like Sunmed's the traveller really has no recourse. If he complains, he can't say he was misinformed. Some samples:

About a beach at one hotel on Evia: "The beach is nothing terrific, consisting of black grit and pebbles."

The food at one of its hotels on Zante: "In 1977 the food was pretty awful, in 1978 the kitchen was being moved so there was no food at all, which was an improvement, and in 1979 your guess is as good as mine."

The famed island of Mykonos, usually descibed as "swinging" by conventional tour operators, gets a more candid assessment:

"At the time of writing, there were two space people striding around the town dressed in home-made space suits, gold boots with six-inch heels, stage makeup and a Captain Kremmen plastic death ray. . . . There were also a magician with a cloak, Kojaks by the score and a lady (?) parading a superb figure encased in a skin-tight leopardskin leotard."

Such graphic descriptions may deter the retired couple from Bournemouth from holidaying in such surroundings, but then the sideshow itself is probably an attraction as noteworthy as the Greek sunshine and blue skies. How are you going to get them to the Acroplis after they've seen Mykonos?

PETER HADEKEL

PQ's Indispensable Man

QUEBEC — If there is anyone who can be considered indispensable to the Parti Quebecois government, it is Jacques Parizeau, the portly 48-year-old finance minister who has kept Quebec afloat through more than two years of political turbulence.

While Premier Rene Levesque spends his time squabbling with Ottawa politicians and running circles around the concept of sovereignty-association, Parizeau stays home to mind the store.

Most observers agree that Parizeau has done an excellent job managing Quebec's finances through a difficult period. He has maintained the province's credit rating on the international money markets and developed imaginative programs to aid the Quebec economy.

Parizeau's value to the PQ has never been more apparent. He is currently responsible for three critical matters which could determine the government's political fate.

Crippling Strikes Loom

First there is the potentially explosive issue of contract talks between the government and 300,000 unionized workers in the public sector.

As chairman of the Quebec treasury board, Parizeau is in charge of the delicate negotiations with Quebec's militant public service unions which unleashed crippling general strikes across the province during previous negotiations in 1972 and 1975-76.

The finance minister, with a reputation as a pennypinching conservative, is striking a tough pose. He has warned public sector workers that the days of "exuberant" salary increases are over and public sector wages must be brought into line with those in the private sector.

Another stick of political dynamite is Quebec's bid to purchase Asbestos Corp., the second-largest producer of asbestos in the province. Quebec announced its intention to purchase the company in October 1977, but Asbestos Corp.'s American parent — General Dynamics of St. Louis — has been playing hard to get.

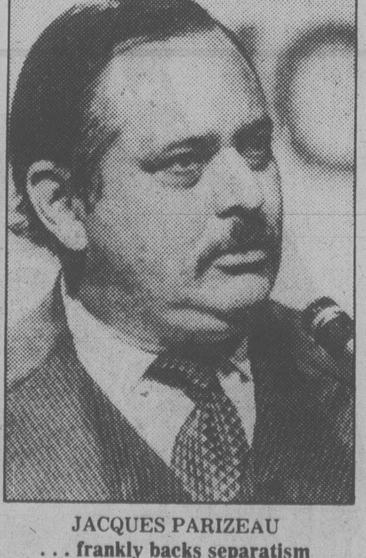
In December, Parizeau tabled a bill in the national assembly allowing the government to expropriate the Quebec assets of the company. Expropriation is a dirty word in the business world and Parizeau will have to handle the issue carefully to avoid souring relations with the business community.

The third challenge facing Parizeau is the 1979-80 provincial budget to be tabled in about six weeks. Reports indicate he is having a tough time coming up with enough budget goodies to satisfy voters in a referendum year.

Last year, he cut taxes in a move that was immediately interpreted as a prelude to a Quebec referendum. But since then political circumstances have pushed the referendum date back and it is now expected to be held late this year or in the spring of 1980.

Parizeau may be strapped for cash this year because provincial revenues have been lower than forecast and the federal government has shifted more of the spending burden to the provinces by cutting back on some programs. Parizeau claims this has cost Quebec $700 million.

The finance minister must decide whether he can afford to continue the politically popular program of selective sales tax cuts on clothing, textiles, furniture and shoes. He wiped out the eight per cent sales tax on these goods in last year's budget and Quebec manufacturers have been happily reaping the benefits.



JACQUES PARIZEAU
. . . frankly backs separatism

In his conservatively cut suits, thumbs thrust into his waistcoat, Parizeau looks more like a big-time international banker than the financial manager for a separatist government. But his conversion to the Parti Quebecois cause back in 1969 is viewed as a turning point in the party's history. It brought credibility to the PQ, which had been criticized for its shaky economic ideas.

The son of a wealthy Montreal stockbroker, Parizeau earned a doctorate from the London School of Economics and a British accent to go along with it. He still utters the occasional "By Jove" in English conversation.

In the early 1960s he did consulting work for the Bank of Canada and a federal royal commission before moving on to become the top financial adviser to three Quebec governments.

Douglas Fullerton, who worked with Parizeau in those years, says "the absence of a big job offer from the federal government" was the turning point.

As economic adviser to the governments of Jean Lesage, Daniel Johnson and Jean-Jacques Bertrand, Parizeau played a key role in Quebec's Quiet Revolution. He helped establish many of the government institutions that have turned Quebec into a "big government" province.

An impulsive man who says what is on his mind, Parizeau is considered more honest than most PQ cabinet ministers about the government's goals. "Independence, sovereignty-association, separation, it all means the same to me," he once told an interviewer.

Wants Quebec Currency

When Parizeau says Quebec independence is above all an "emotional" issue, he is revealing a deep-seated part of his own personality. He still has the slightly deformed finger he broke in a teenage fight with someone who told him to "speak white."

When Sun Life Assurance Co. pulled its head office out of Quebec, Parizeau bitterly compared the company to African colonialists ripping off the "natives."

Despite his pro-independence convictions, he has been unable to convince cabinet colleagues that an independent Quebec should have its own currency. He has always argued that a common currency would severely restrict Quebec's economic independence.

But his biggest test will be in the referendum campaign. As the PQ's economic wizard, Parizeau will have to explain the economic cost of independence — the biggest hang-up Quebecers have about sovereignty.

Says Douglas Fullerton, author of a recent federal study showing an independent Quebec could not survive: "He's been doing a splendid job against heavy odds. But he's been shoving the economics [of independence] aside and sooner or later he's got to be honest about it."

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

A Potpourri: Tenants, Unity, Unemployment

Conversations and correspondence from the past week. . .

A conversation with a gentleman recently retired to Victoria from Montreal. He has served as presiding officer of several major national private and public corporations and worked with their Quebec wings for years.

His perceptions of national unity issues differ radically from those heard most often in western Canada. What Canadians must realize, he believes, is that the crisis of national unity will not be resolved quickly. He thinks there is a tendency for us to want a speedy answer, to want to get it all over with — whatever "it" may be — either through a Quebec referendum or through a new constitution or whatever.

He predicts, however, that this will not happen, that Canadians will have to get used to a long period of tension and anxiety before there is any final resolution. As Levésque waters down the concept of "sovereignty-association" further and further, the much-touted referendum will become little more than a request for a mandate for Quebec to negotiate a new deal with Ottawa. After that, the tension will continue and probably even worsen while the negotiations go on.

The second point he makes is that we should in no way underestimate the capability of the Parti Quebecois cabinet. In terms of intellect and background, he says, they far outshine the federal cabinet and probably the other provincial premiers too.

He believes the reason for this is that nationalism has become a cause that many of Quebec's outstanding citizens feel is worth fighting for, worth sacrificing for. In the rest of Canada, on the other hand, politics is not seen by many as a top profession and few of the most promising young men are ready to make the sacrifices demanded of politicians.

His greatest concern, however, does not deal directly with the Quebec situation. Rather, he says, the downfall of the country may come about because "Canadians are more and more losing interest in Canada." Travelling the country, he found few Canadians willing to talk about the country's problems, willing to admit that there is a crisis that can be solved only through accommodation and compromise.

"People talk about the need for cheaper air fares to get Canadians travelling in Canada," he says, "but I wonder how many people would take advantage of it if it only cost $10 to fly from Victoria to Halifax. People just wouldn't want to spend their three weeks of vacation there when they can go to Hawaii or somewhere instead."

Harry Shergold, an inveterate Times reader and observer of affairs political, is taking up the cause of the tenant. Shergold has done considerable research and found that government shelter programs are tremendously biased in favor of the homeowner.

Here in B.C., for example, he found that homeowners receive, through the homeowners' grant, much more than any tenant can receive through government renter programs. Moreover, all homeowners receive the grant regardless of their income, while the main renters' program, SAFER, goes only to those with low incomes. It's the same in just about every province in Canada, Shergold found.

He finds the situation particularly galling in B.C., however, because assessment changes last year gave a significant break to landlords with no corresponding help to their tenants. He checked on four large apartments in his home neighborhood of James Bay and found that they had paid thousands of dollars less in tax in 1978 than in 1977. In one case, the difference was almost $22,000.

"But that just amounted to windfall profits for the building owners," he says. "The tenants never got any decrease in rent as a result."

Last, a poem that arrived anonymously in the mail during the week. It's not our policy to print anonymous material, but this poem speaks so eloquently for the thousands of unemployed young in our city, that we are making an exception for it:

We are your product
Do you understand?
Twelve years of your education
Raised our hopes
And gave us dreams
Of biting the good life plum.

We are your product
Do you understand?
We knocked on doors
And travelled miles.

Now we are wise,
TV savvy, smart and Illusion free,
We are your product.

'Cause we found out
Annoying as it seems
No one wants us
Or our dreams.
We are your product.

On the Arms Race

I must take issue with the Feb. 14 Times article Is The U.S. Preparing To Wage a Nuclear War?

The fact that the U.S. military budget went up by a small increment (three or so per cent in real terms) does not mean that the U.S. is continually increasing its military budget. The reason for this mistake is that the effects of inflation are not taken into account. In terms of real purchasing power, which is what counts, the Pentagon's budget decreased by 10 per cent from 1964 to 1977.

A glaring deficiency of the article is its failure to place the issue in the contest of the threat from the enormous Soviet military build-up which is what makes the U.S. response intelligible. For instance, from 1967 to 1977 the Soviets went from 600 ICBMs and 500 SLBMs behind to about 600 ICBMs and 13 SLBMs ahead. These quantitive changes were accompanied by the qualitative improvements to MIRB technology and the reduction of the circular error probability increasing Soviet pre-emptive capacity. This is why improvements of the U.S. arsenal by M-X and Trident are vital — not necessarily to increase total destructive power but to ensure surviving a Soviet first strike. If the U.S. couldn't survive an atomic Pearl Harbor it would make for a dangerously unstable international situation—the west wouldn't be able to resist Soviet blackmail.

The author castigates those whom he believes do not question their assumptions. However he doesn't justify by a scrap of real evidence his assumption that the acquisition of a nuclear capability means the intention to use it to wage war. A glance at history suffices to disprove this utterly. The U.S. acquired a nuclear capability which gave it originally absolute, and later, overwhelming superiority, yet the intention was not to wage a nuclear war.

It would take quite considerable space to analyze and rebut the objectionable statements of this article but to comment finally on the plea for unilateral disarmament:

The way to stop is to stop only when one's enemy stops. To stop unilaterally as the U.S. did in Vietnam is to surrender. The path to prevent the Kremlin's despots from indulging their fantasies is not by inviting their aggression through unilateral disarmament but by the maintenance of adequate strength (i.e. deterrence). It is impossible to achieve by the same policy of surrender which led to the enslavement and mass murder of the Vietnamese, Laotians and Cambodians. — John Clarke, 301-1070 Barclay Street.

Six Years After . . .

I would like to know when that sum of money, allocated by the government for medical facilities in Vietnam for children, is going to be sent on its way. The money was voted on and approved in 1973; here it is the second month of 1979. In the meantime a committee was set up to ensure that the money reached the proper people and no others. Those studies showed the definite need of such facilities and should be administered through such agencies as UNICEF.

In 1976 Health Minister Bob McClelland was asked about reconstituting the committee to do this but he replied that since no money was set aside in a separate fund for this purpose there was no use reconstituting the committee at that time. (Since when do committees have to be paid? They are paid government representative at present, why can't they devote their time to this matter and get it cleared up?)

In 1977 Labor Minister Allan Williams said the commitment still stands, since the vote was unanimous by all party representatives. Also, Premier Bill Bennett acknowledged that it is still a commitment.

In 1978 Mr. Frank Calder, chairman of the new all-party committee, criticized the sending of this money to Vietnam, saying it could just as well be spent in B.C. Consequently the committee was disbanded. Why should one man make his objection so forcibly that the entire project is thrown out? What power and what right has he to reject the measure when the government approved it? Politics is peculiar if one ordinary citizen can throw a monkey wrench in such a worthwhile cause.

I understand that in 1978 a representative of the Vietnamese embassy in Ottawa travelled here to express his government's thanks on behalf of the children of that country.

This is The Year of the Child. I feel it is up to Mr. Bennett, to make this come true in Vietnam. — Barbara Harris, 619 St. Patrick Street.

After 20 Years At B.C.'s Helm, The Crowning Triumph For W.A.C. Bennett Came with the 1975 Victory by His Son, Bill

Politics Was His Only Science

ONE minor incident in the long and extraordinary political career of William Andrew Cecil Bennett probably stands out in sharper focus for many British Columbians than some of his major accomplishments and milestones.

It's the recollection of an emotional 75-year-old besieged by jubilant Social Credit supporters at the Kelowna campaign headquarters of his son Bill on a December night in 1975.

Watched by hundreds of thousands on television, the elder Bennett stood amid the joyous hubub of election victory, alternately smiling and weeping as he groped for words to express his feelings.

It was a triumphant moment he had seen repeated time and again in his unprecedented string of provincial election victories spanning two decades. But for Bennett the evening held a much greater significance.

A little more than three years previously, his Social Credit government had gone down to a stunning defeat at the hands of the New Democratic Party, after 20 years in power.

Now, phoenix-like, the Socreds had arisen from the ashes led by his son, Bill Bennett. No political leader throughout Canadian history could have tasted any sweeter satisfaction, and Bennett's mobile face told the whole story.

Wiping tears from the corners of his eyes, he told the throng: "It's a great night for the people of British Columbia . . . a people's government is back in power once again."

ALTHOUGH still outwardly vigorous and healthy that night and for some time after, Bennett — to those who had known him in his political heyday — was already showing the first faint signs of frailty.

While he was in office, even well into his 70s, he never appeared to wilt under the physical demands of the job. He would subtract 25 years from his calendar age because he didn't drink or smoke and would come up with a physical age in the late 40s, crediting his tremendous stamina simply to "clean living, proper eating."

As his second decade in power drew to a close he claimed he felt younger than when he became premier at the age of 51. Each year in power, he would say, was an "unfolding — like reading a book, one page following another, each year more exciting than the last."

He loved the job. To W.A.C. Bennett there was "only one science, the science of politics, because everything else depends on how good a government is."

From Aug. 1, 1952, this businessman-turned-politician ruled B.C. with an iron grip of benevolence, transforming the province with massive road and rail-building programs and two of the largest hydro-electric development projects in North American history.

He was a staunch advocate of the free enterprise system, yet his administration was to the forefront in Canada in introduction of province-wide hospital insurance and, through Crown corporations, operated its own power distribution system, railway and ferry fleet. Bennett was also among the first advocates of a guaranteed annual income for all Canadians.

SOME called him a dictator and in the latter years his critics increasingly accused him of arrogance.

During the 1969 election campaign he fired back at a heckler: "Dictator, you call me! What dictator known to man has laid his lot on the line seven times in 17 years?"

Bennett was first elected premier in 1952. He was re-elected in 1953, 1956, 1960, 1963, and 1969, each win strengthening the inevitability of the next election result. As surely as night followed day, it seemed, B.C. would have a Social Credit government with W. A. C. Bennett at its head.

But then came that fateful day, Aug. 30, 1972. With an unexpectedness which jolted the province like a major earthquake, the Socreds were tossed out of office — although Bennett himself won re-election.

The voters not only ignored his frantic campaign warning that the "socialist hordes are at the gates," but slid back the bolts and let them in.

The result ended Bennett's ascendancy, but not even the victorious NDP hordes could detract from his record for durability and staying power which made him a political Methuselah.

His stewardship had surpassed in 1965 Sir Richard McBride's 12½ years in office, making Bennett's tenure the longest of any premier in the province's history.

When Bennett formally tendered his resignation Sept. 15, 1972, he was told by then Lt.-Gov. John Nicholson: "Thank you for a job well done."

Although he continued for a few months as opposition leader it was an unaccustomed and uncomfortable role for him. He resigned from his South Okanagan seat and the riding elected son Bill in a September, 1973, byelection.

Born Sept. 6, 1900, at Hastings in Albert County in eastern New Brunswick, W. A. C. was the son of Andrew Havelock Bennett and Emma Mary Burns, people of hardy, rural stock dedicated to the United Empire Loyalist cause. A year later the Bennetts, with daughters Cora, Bernice and Olivia and sons Russell and Cecil, moved to Hampton, N.B., and it was there "Cece" went to school.

His father, a staunch Conservative, educated his son in politics and by the age of 11 Cece Bennett was marching in a torchlight procession in support of Sir Robert Borden's 1911 federal general election campaign against Liberal Sir Wilfred Laurier, an advocate of free trade with the United States.

Sixty years later, with a bust of Sir Wilfrid adorning his Victoria office, Premier Bennett was to call for a common market with the U.S. in the face of anti-American clamor on the country touched off by U.S. import sanctions.

The Bennett family made another move in 1915, this time to Saint John, N.B., where Cece attended high school and worked part-time in a hardware store. Two years later, he left school at age 17 to work full-time, then enlisted in the air corps as a pilot trainee, but the First World War ended eight months later, before he could receive flight training.

He moved west to Edmonton where he pushed a handcart for a hardware store and furthered his education through correspondence courses in accounting, banking, business management and business correspondence. He retained his interest in politics, serving a term in the Alberta boys' parliament.

He taught Sunday School and joined the United Church Young People's group where he met Annie Elizabeth May Richards, a school teacher from Wellington on Vancouver Island. They were married in 1927.

By 1928, Bennett was a partner in two Alberta hardware stores but sold out two years later and moved to Kelowna in the Okanagan Valley, where he built up a chain of hardware stores bearing his name in Kelowna, Kamloops, Vernon and Penticton.

HIS aim was to amass a fortune so he could devote his full time to politics.

At 34 he successfully sought a directorship in the newly-formed Bank of Canada after advocating in 1929, when boom turned to bust, that a central bank be established.

In 1968, after four years of dogged determination to end B.C.'s status as a financial branch plant of Eastern Canada, Premier Bennett presided at the opening in Vancouver of the first branch of the Bank of British Columbia.

Almost from the day he arrived in Kelowna, Bennett became a hard-working member of the B.C. Conservative party. He campaigned first for his party and later for the coalition administration formed by Liberals and Conservatives in 1947. He was first elected to the B.C. legislature in 1941 as Conservative member for South Okanagan, a seat he was to retain without interruption through successive elections.

An outspoken backbencher, his independent attitude put him in disfavor with some party officials. Twice he was unsuccessful in bids for the leadership of the Conservative wing of the coalition. In 1948, he suffered a rare election defeat in the federal riding of Yale, beaten by O. L. Jones, standard bearer for the CCF.

He never looked toward Ottawa again and whenever he was asked later about possible federal aspirations, he would reply:

"I had this call to go to Ottawa. I accepted. Then I was defeated. So nobody can ever say I did not offer my services to Canada."

Then, in a typically dramatic style, he would add:

"There is nothing higher. I'd rather be premier of B.C. than prime minister of Canada. We have great development here. This is the choice part of Canada."

A coalition move to introduce an alternative system of voting gave Bennett his break.

With Liberal and Conservative party members chafing under the restraints of coalition, the government introduced the system under which electors voted for candidates in order of choice. It was widely heralded as allowing Liberals and Conservatives to vote along party lines while, at the same time, allowing them to register second-choice votes for each other, thus reducing the chances of the opposition CCF assuming power. But the plan didn't take into consideration the emergence of a fourth party.

DISENCHANTED with the coalition administration headed by Liberal Byron (Boss) Johnson, Bennett crossed the floor to sit as an independent.

At the same time a Social Credit movement, spreading from Alberta, was gaining momentum in the province, although unrepresented in the legislature.

Bennett borrowed 20 books on Social Credit to study the unorthodox monetary theories of Major C. H. Douglas, founder of the movement in England.

The Kelowna merchant traded in an expensive Packard for a modest Chevrolet painted in Social Credit party green and began buying his standard charcoal-grey suits from a Socred tailor instead of one supporting the Conservatives. And in the June 12, 1952, provincial election he ran as a Socred candidate.

The conversion to Social Credit from life-long Conservative views may have been spontaneous. But the sense of timing was superb.

In the election, which followed an acrimonious break-up of the coalition, Social Credit scored a stunning upset and William Andrew Cecil Bennett emerged as the head of a minority Social Credit government. The final election count gave Social Credit 19 seats followed by CCF 18, Liberals 6, Conservatives 4, Labor 1.

The fledgling Social Credit party, which had campaigned without a leader, chose Bennett as its head largely because of his legislative experience.

With a flair for showmanship soon to become familiar to British Columbians, Cec Bennett marched "this little government" of 10 cabinet ministers two by two up the legislature driveway the morning of Aug. 1, 1952, and took over administration of the province.

Many of the original members of B.C. Social Gredit soon found to their dismay that Bennett had no intention whatsoever of invoking the "funny money" theories of the late William Aberhart, founder and first premier of Social Credit in Alberta.

"Remember," Bennett would say of Aberhart, "he was elected when people wore gunny sacks and eggs were 10 cents a dozen."

Instead, Bennett hammered out his own political philosophy, borrowing platform planks at will from the wreckage of the two old-line parties, tempering the new government with his own strict set of Christian principles and the business ethics that had made him a millionaire.

Eight months later the minority government was defeated in a house vote over an education financing formula — a defeat the opposition parties claimed Bennett deliberately courted in order to seek a working majority in a new election.

In the June, 1953, election — again held under the alternative voting system — Social Credit finished with 28 of the then 48 seats putting the premier solidly in control. One of his first acts was to abolish the alternative voting system, bringing back the traditional single-vote election.

Years later he said simply that Social Credit monetary theories "must be implemented at the national level in order to become workable," and left it at that.

The master plan of the Bennett government was aimed at development of B.C.'s largely untapped natural resources. He put his cabinet to work on efficient transportation, cheap power and blazing new trails into the province for foreign and domestic investment, all of which were lacking prior to Social Credit.

He was successful in getting private enterprise to develop primary industry and B.C. grew rich in the process. But the province found itself with an economy predicated on exporting raw materials — timber, mineral concentrates and natural gas — and distinctly short of manufacturing and processing industries by the late 1960s and early 1970s.

The opposition New Democratic Pary under its leader Dave Barret, a former social worker, disparagingly called it the "cut-'em-down-dig-it-up-ship-it-out" philosophy.

An aggressive highways department under the leadership of P. A. (Flying Phil) Gaglardi criss-crossed the hinterlands with blacktop, giving B.C. one of the finest highway grids in the world — 30,000 miles of road by the 20th anniversary of the Bennett government.

But hydro power was Bennett's pride and joy, and a few months after his 1972 defeat he said he regarded the damming of the Columbia and Peace Rivers as the greatest achievement of his two decades in power.

Apart from a few voices of dessent and criticism raised at the time, the Columbia River Treaty of 1963 was hailed as a triumph for Bennett's tough bargaining skills.

A consortium of U.S. power companies gave B.C. a $275 million advance payment for 30 years' worth of power. The U.S. also agreed to pay $69.6 million for flood control benefits and Bennett went ahead with the three dams — the Duncan, Arrow and Mica.

Unfortunately, no one foresaw the rapid escalation of interest rates, labor and material costs that would swell B.C.'s committed treaty costs through the late 1960s and into the 1970s.

As inflation soared and dam construction costs far outstripped estimates, that original lump-sum payment began to look less and less attractive. It became a gleeful annual exercise for the NDP opposition to place questions on the legislature's order paper, requesting the latest comparison between treaty income and revenue.

In 1976, it was estimated that the Columbia River Treaty had cost B.C. nearly $1 billion more than the province had received from the U.S. for so-called downstream benefits.

The 1976 figures showed that the cost of the project to that point was $1.468 billion while total revenues, including interest from the U.S. amounted to $479.1 million. leaving a difference of $989,318,000.

But Bennett, typically, was unrepentant. He maintained all along that if the two rivers had not been dammed at the same time it would have cost B.C. hundreds of millions of dollars more to dam them separately later. The scheme had given the province some of the cheapest power in North America.

He also insisted that the justification for this government's sale was that the Americans will be in dire need of downstream power by 1993 when the treaty comes up for renewal.

By that time there will be a critical shortage of power in the U.S., he predicted. "To hold that power they will bid very high, and enormous payments will be coming back."

When private enterprise stood in the way of the Social Credit master-plan, Bennett steam-rollered the industrialists with expropriation. Such was the case in the creation of "Bennett's Navy," a fleet of ferries that at one time outnumbered the Canadian navy's.

That was back in 1958, when the government took over the Black Ball ferry system between the mainland and Vancouver Island to head off a threatened strike.

By far the most controversial of his government's actions was the sudden expropriation of the huge B.C. Electric Co. power-transportation utility and the passing of legislation barring court action on the takeover price. One Vancouver newspaper said Bennett had "gone berserk" and was suffering from "dementia politico."

The late Sherwood Lett, then chief justice of B.C., ruled the BCE takeover constitutionally invalid. But the premier, after long negotiations with the B.C. Power Corporation, BCE's sole parent, legalized the deal by getting acceptace of a final price of $197 million, some $87 million more than the price originally set by the government.

Bennett renamed the utility the B.C. hydro and Power Authority and it served as the organizational vehicle for the huge power projects he envisaged.

Another of the government's accomplishments was reorganization of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, known for years as the "Please Go Easy" because of its irregular schedules and erratic financial performance. By 1971, the centennial of B.C.'s entry into Confederation, the Bennett government had laid 670 miles of new track, giving the system 1.121 miles of rail.

The country's third largest railway also acquired the best in new rolling stock, ultra-modern communications equipment and a new name: the British Columbia Railway. Bennett viewed the railway as a vitally needed element in preventing the Peace River country from becoming an economic satellite of Alberta.

As finance minister, a post he assumed in 1954, Bennett was heaped with opposition abuse for his financial policies. When Social Credit came to power, B.C. had $200 million in debts and its lines of credit were exhausted. The government was holding $152 million worth of paper from the PGE, which Bennett promptly forgave, thereby chopping direct debt by three-quarters.

To finance the massive hydro projects and road developments, the government's Crown corporations borrowed huge amounts on international and domestic markets which were guaranteed by the government.

The debts were listed as contingent liabilities and showed on their ledgers rather than the government's. Thus, Bennett was able to declare the province debt-free in 1959, although its citizens had one of the highest per-capita rates of indirect indebtedness in North America.

An elaborate bond-burning ceremony was staged in Kelowna, during which the premier shot a flaming arrow at a bargeload of paid-off government debentures floating in Okanagan Lake. The arrow missed and an RCMP officer swimming offshore set the bonds ablaze with a cigarette lighter.

Bennett's flair for the theatrical was nowhere more apparent than in the legislature. It was the only provincial house containing representatives of all four major political parties and the cut and thrust of debate became in the words of one cabinet minister "more hack and slash."

Bennett's staccato, rambling arm-waving style was never described as classical oratory but it was effective, generating almost schizophrenic love-hate reactions on the campaign trail.

If he felt the opposition was filibustering he would mete out punishment in the form of late-night or even all-night sittings, until the recalcitrant MLAs came to heel and passed the stalled legislation or spending estimates.

Particularly in his last session as premier — in 1972 — Bennett seemed to take a perverse delight in goading the opposition benches into a fury. He would refuse to answer questions, sometimes hurling almost incoherent insults across the floor.

In that session such tactics generated an atmosphere of bitterness and, for the first time, led to serious speculation as to his political impairment through aging.

Bennett had a stock phrase to summarize his philosophy of government: "True direct government is that the elected must govern and must not be governed by the electors. Unless the elected govern, you have dictatorship. If the electors govern, you have anarchy."

Viewing politics strictly from a provincial perspective, he was obsessed by the depredations he felt successive federal governments had committed against B.C.

Discriminatory tariffs and freight rates, equalization payments, off-shore mineral rights, federal fiscal policies — these were things that infuriated him.

Bennett once described Lester Pearson as "the worst prime minister this country ever had," and added that Ottawa considers B.C. "only as a goblet to be drained" to keep Quebec afloat.

He added little to the national agonizing over French-English relations in the late 1960s and 1970s. His rare forays into the realm of constitutional problems were characterized by solemn professions of loyalty to Queen and country, strong opposition to any suggestion of enforced bilingualism.

He once told an astounded group of premiers, the prime minister and experts attending a constitutional conference that "some of my best friends are French-Canadians" — with a perfectly straight face. Prime Minister Trudeau subsequently called him a "bigot" on the subject of language rights and Quebec. Bennett replied: "I just smiled and smiled and smiled."

Quebec's problems, Bennett insisted, were much more economic than they were constitutional, cultural or linguistic. He faulted both the Ottawa and Quebec governments for failing to develop that province's resources, which he said were among the richest in North America.

Bennett's own national dream centred on welding Canada into five distinct economic and political regions — the Maritimes, Quebec, Ontario, the Prairies and British Columbia.

He harbored territorial ambitions of his own. He wanted the Yukon annexed to B.C., and said so intermittently for years.

Portage and Main Finally De-Winded

WINNIPEG (CP) — The famous corner of Portage and Main offically entered a new era Friday with the opening of an underground pedestrian concourse.

The construction of the concourse, costing an estimated $7,300,000 means pedestrians no longer have to cross the imposing corner that many Winnipeggers boast is the windiest in Canada.

Pedestrians now go underground to make three of the four possible crossings at the intersection. The fourth crossing remains at street level until sometime in April, when the concourse is expected to be finished.

When the job is completed it will be illegal to walk across Portage and Main above ground level.

Dignitaries such as Mayor Robert Steen officially opened the development that will have 22,000 square feet of pedestrian area and 6,000 square feet of commercial area.

Test Riles India

GENEVA (Reuter) — India asked the UN Human Rights Commission on Friday to take up the case of an Indian woman immigrant to Britain being forced to take a virginity test before she was allowed into the country.

School Razed

KINISTINO, Sask. (CP) — Damage estimates ranged as high as $1 million after fire destroyed all but one wing of R. J. Humphries School despite the efforts of four area fire departments.

Harley Sundbo, director of education for Kinistino school division 55, said the fire began in the home economics room but no cause has been determined. No one was injured.

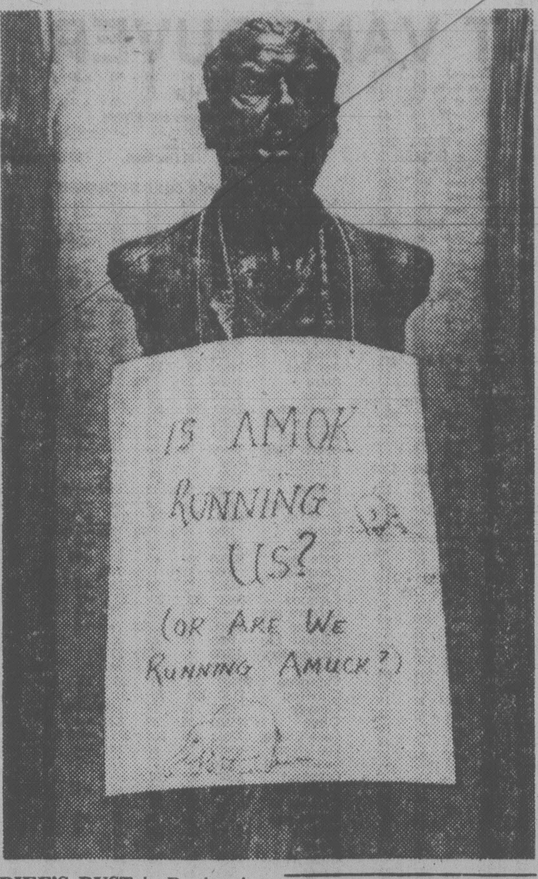
Film Premiered

Sintaluta, Sask. (CP) — This small Prairie town about 80 kilometres east of Regina is an unlikely setting for a national film premiere.

But while the Sintaluta Memorial Hall may lack glamor, it was filled with excitement as about 200 local residents gathered for the Canadian premiere of the National Film Board's production of Paper Wheat.

The film is based on a play of the same name which was created by Saskatoon's 25 Street Theatre in 1976.

"We're going to distribute them in any way we can," he said. "Anyone interested in a copy will be welcome to one."



DIEF'S BUST is Regina is draped with a sign backing the protest of an anti-nuclear group which demonstrated this week at the Saskatchewan legislature.Amok is the name of a mining company constructing a uranium mine in the north of the province.

Library Puzzled

YORKTON, Sask. (CP) — The 48 branches of the Parkland regional library are in a quandary over what to do with boxes of books that have been delivered, but were never ordered.

Regional librarian Stan Skrzeszewski said the boxes, each containing 50 copies of the same book, have been arriving at some branches and if all the branches are favored, the library system will have 2,400 hardcover books it's not sure what to do with.

The book is entitled Speaking Together: Canada's Native Women and has apparently been in storage for some time, he said. The book was published in 1975 as an international women's year project, and is being distributed by the secretary of state.

Reckoning the federal government wanted to get rid of a surplus, Skrzeszewski said the regional library now has the same problem.

Probe on Refinery

REGINA (CP) — There will be a full inquiry before the Saskatchewan government approves a uranium refinery for Warman, or any other community in the province, Premier Allan Blakeney says.

If the federal government's Eldorado Nuclear Ltd. rives the government a formal proposal for a refinery at Warman, about 20 kilometres northeast of Saskatoon, a full inquiry on the impact will follow, he said.

Funds Required

RED DEER (CP) — The Red Deer regional planning commission will appeal directly to Municipal Affairs Minister Dick Johnston for more money for the coming year, according to commission director Bob Cundy.

The commission has to prepare 33 regional plans on an allotment of $1,217,000. It has estimated expenditures at $1,378,000.

Fire Damage Declines

EDMONTON (CP) — The amount of timberland lost to forest fires last year was down about one-fifth from 1977 despite an increase in the number of fires, the Alberta forest service has reported.

Last year, 19,371 acres were burned, down from 24,506 acres in 1977. The number of forest fires increased to 675 from 556.

"Better organization, better equipment and more and stronger suppression action helped keep down the amount of timber burned," the service said.

IS PROPERTY SELLING?

That's a question we are asked almost every day. Frankly, the way a property "moves" when it is listed for sale depends a lot on how it is handled. For this reason, when you are selling, we suggest you give us a call. We are "Old enough to be experienced, young enough to be aggressive and small enough to be personalized."

Tax Tips '78

Tax Tips are prepared for the Victoria Times by Revenue Canada. Detailed tax information can be obtained from the local Revenue Canada office, 1415 Vancouver St. by phoning 386-2176 between 8:15 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday to Friday.

Q. Who claims the Child Tax Credit?

A. For a married couple, usually the mother claims the credit since she is the one who received the Family Allowance in 1978. A single parent (mother or father with legal custody) who received family allowance in December, 1978 — one who is widowed, single, separated, divorced or not legally married — will be the one to apply.

Q. I paid $1,500 in alimony to my former spouse last year. Can I claim all of this on my income tax return?

A. There is no dollar limit on the amount of alimony that can be deducted. You may claim the full amount paid in the year as long as the payments are made on a periodic basis for the maintenance of your spouse and, or children, and are in accordance with a decree, a court order or a written agreement.

Q. I took an early retirement this year when I turned 58. Can I claim a deduction for my pension income, or do I have to wait until I'm 65?

A. Regardless of age you may claim a deduction for the pension you receive up to a maximum of $1,000.00. The pension income deduction does not apply to CPP and QPP benefits or the old age pension.

Q. Would you explain the tax reduction for children?

A. You are able to claim a tax reduction of $50 for each "dependent" child living in Canada and born in 1961 or later. However, if you may not claim a personal exemption for your child you are not entitled to claim a $50 reduction for that child. Please remember to indicate the number of children you are claiming on line 63 on page 4 of your return. For more information on the federal tax reduction see Item 50 in your 1978 tax guide.

Q. I am a full-time university student but have a temporary job some 200 miles away. Can I deduct from my income the moving expenses I must pay to move closer to the new job location?

A. Yes. If you were in full-time attendance at a university or other post-secondary education institution in Canada and you moved your residence to take a job (including summer employment) or to start a business you may claim a moving expense deduction. you claim the deduction against income earned at your new location, not from any income you may have earned before the move.

Q. I received a scholarship last year and had to move away from home to attend full-time courses at a university. Can I deduct my moving expenses?

A. Yes. If you moved to attend full-time courses at a university or other post-secondary educational institution in Canada you may deduct moving expenses, but only if these are claimed against award income such as scholarships fellowships, research grants and similar awards. The moving expenses may not exceed the amount of award income reported on your return. Be sure to inclue Form T1-M with your income tax return.

Q. Can a university student claim a property tax credit for rent paid during the year?

A. Students who are roomers, tenants or boarders off campus in Alberta, British Columbia, Manitoba and Ontario can calculate the rent paid during the year towards the property tax credit, up to a certain maximum. Students must be over 16 and their principal residence cannot be that of someone else who is claiming them as a dependent.

Q. I dropped out of university after Christmas. Can I claim an education deduction for the four months I was in full-time attendance?

A. Yes, provided you meet all the qualifications outlined in Item 42 in your 1978 Guide. Also, when claiming the education deduction attach to your return a fully completed "education deduction certificate" (form T2202A or form T2202 issued by the educational institution). This will confirm that you were enrolled in a qualifying program.

Q. How do I calculate my education deduction?

A. You should multiply $50 for each month in 1978 during which you were in full-time attendance at a qualifying educational institution. Your claim should be accompanied by a fully completed "education deduction certificate" form T2202A or form T2202 issued by the educational institution which confirms your enrollment in a qualifying program. For more details see Guide Item 42.

Auschwitz Photos Show Death March

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The first known photographs of the gas chambers at the infamous Auschwitz concentration camp were released Friday — the result of research inspired by the television serial Holocaust.

The photographs — clearly showing lines of prisoners being marched to the death plants — were found by Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) aerial photograph analysts Dino Brugioni and Robert Poirier among film taken by British and U.S. reconnaissance planes in 1944 and 1945.

About 2.5 million Jews — many of them Hungarian — died at the Auschwitz-Birkenau complex in southern Poland between early 1940 and November, 1944, when Nazi German forces began to blow up the five gas chambers in the face of advancing Soviet troops.

The photo analysts said they were inspired to check Second World War reconnaissance film after watching the Holocaust series, which deals with the murder of millions of European Jews during the war, and being reminded that Auschwitz was close to a strategically-important synthetic fuel plant.

Because of the unreliability of the equipment, air crews turned on the cameras early to check that they were working properly as they approached the I.G. Farben fuel plant, eight kilometres to the east of Auschwitz.

Canadian Farmers Join Beef

WASHINGTON (CP) — A handful of Canadian farmers parked borrowed tractors on the busy street in front of the Canadian Embassy on Friday to demonstrate their desire for higher farm prices.

The eight Manitoba and Saskatchewan members of the Canadian Agriculture Movement met for about a half-hour with embassy officials to air their complaints about what they consider as far too low prices paid to farmers for their products.

The Canadians arrived in Washington earlier in the week to show their support for the demonstration by the American Agriculture Movement. Hundreds of U.S. farmers seeking higher prices have been camped in downtown Washington for weeks, riding tractors through city streets and meeting with government officials.

The Canadians, using tractors belonging to U.S. farmers, were accompanied in the drive to the embassy by four American farmers driving their own tractors.

Vitamins Poison Young?

ROSEBURG, Ore. (UPI) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration will investigate reports that chewable multiple vitamins with iron, including the colorful Flintstones brand, may be poisoning Oregon children.

The FDA decision was announced Friday, a day after the seventh such poisoning in a month was reported to the Douglas County Poison Centre. In the latest incident, a two-year-old boy was hospitalized after taking 30 of the tablets.

The Flintstones products are those most often involved in the Roseburg cases because the colorful tablets look cute and are often mistaken for candy, said Barry Keil, director of the poison centre's pharmacy.

He cited other brands which can do damage to a variety of internal organs, including Chox, Bugs Bunny, Monsters, Pals, Spiderman, Geritol Junior and house brands sold by large drugstore chains.

In announcing the FDA investigation, Roger Lowell of the Portland office said the agency's centre in Washington, D.C., had reported no complaints of problems with the vitamin-iron tablets.

North-South Yemen Border Battles Rage

NICOSIA (AP) — South Yemen's Marxist government said troops of neighboring North Yemen invaded its territory early today and fighting was raging along the border.

Earlier, the official Iraqi News Agency said in a report from San'a, the North Yemeni capital, that fighting had broken out at three points along the border between the two Yemens, situated on the southwestern tip of the Arabian Peninsula.

South Yemeni forces shot down a North Yemeni jet, the agency said.

State-controlled radio in Aden, the South Yemeni capital, said the fighting broke out early today and continued in mid-afternoon. The broadcast was monitored in Nicosia.

Aden Radio said South Yemen's foreign minister, Mohammed Saleh Motei, summoned all foreign ambassadors and asked them to inform their governments of "the North Yemeni aggression."

The Iraqi report said fighting was centred near Qatabah, about 80 kilometres northeast of Taiz, North Yemen's second-largest city, around Mukhayras, 112 kilometres farther east, and near Beihan, about 80 kilometres north of Mukhayras.

The report said the fighting coincided with a wave of arrests of South Yemen sympathizers and supporters in North Yemen.

There have been frequent border incidents in recent months between the two neighbors, who are anxious to unite but are unable to do so because of the opposing ideologies of their governments. North Yemen maintains close ties with pro-West, conservative Saudi Arabia.

Skirmishes have occurred intermittently since last summer.

Margaret's Book Says She Sneaked Pot

WASHINGTON (CP) — A Washington gossip column says Margaret Trudeau discloses in her forthcoming autobiography details about her use of illegal drugs both before and after her marriage to Canada's prime minister.

The Ear, a daily unsigned column in the Washington Star, said Friday the autobiography tells of how the estranged wife of Prime Minister Trudeau used to sneak up to her room at 24 Sussex Drive to smoke marijuana.

The column says an RCMP guard at the Ottawa residence once handed Mrs. Trudeau a stock of incense to burn in hopes of disguising the characteristic aroma of the drug.

Diana McLellan, author of the colorfully-written column, declined in an interview Friday to disclose the source of her information. The Trudeau Autobiography, Beyond Reason, is due to be published in April.

The Ear says Trudeau is portrayed in the book as "the upright good guy: Not at all a swinger." During their courtship, it says, Trudeau insisted that Margaret stop taking birth control pills.

The column says Margaret writes of only one fault with her husband: "He didn't brace her properly for the great switch when she became First Lady."

The column says Mrs. Trudeau writes about her free-spiritied life before meeting Trudeau, including time she spent sampling a variety of narcotics at a North Africa commune.

But after her marriage, Mrs. Trudeau had to associate with other Canadian officials' wives, whom she dubbed "the old crows."

The column says Margaret also discusses her international travels in the book, including an incident in Japan, where the Trudeaus had a fight in front of a variety of dignitaries. And Mrs. Trudeau, after yelling an obscenity at her husband, ran off into the streets.

Firemens' Overtime To Be Aired

A representative of Transport Canada will meet Pat Bay airport firefighters March 6 to discuss their complaint that they are working excessive amounts of overtime.

John Hart, regional representative of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, said Friday the man in charge of airport firefighting services will meet the firemen.

In the meantime, he said, the 13 firefighters will continue their normal shifts and work overtime if necessary.

The firemen work two nine-hour shifts running from 6 a.m. to midnight and complained last week that they were having to work too much overtime because of delayed or charter flights landing or taking off outside those working hours.

Police Alert On Cheques

Saanich police are warning businessmen to be on the lookout for persons passing forged cheques following the thefts earlier this week of a woman's purse and a man's chequebook.

A spokesman said one forged cheque for $400 has already been passed in the name of Ann Doherty who had her purse stolen at a downtown hotel lounge. The purse contained identification cards including driver's licence, social insurance card, Chargex card and birth certificate as well as a number of blank cheques drawn on the Royal Bank of Canada at Hillside and Quadra.

Another forged cheque for $150 was passed in the name of Neil McKechnie who had 25 blank cheques stolen in a break-in at his home. The cheques are drawn on the Royal Bank at Shelbourne and McKenzie.

Businessmen approached by anyone attempting to pass cheques in either name are asked to note the description of the passer, the vehicle he or she may be driving, and to notify the nearest police department without delay.

He Didn't Sleep Well After Deciding to Go Grit

New Liberal leader Jev Tothill of Duncan insists he doesn't feel like the captain of the Titanic.

WHO KNOWS Jevington Blair Tothill? Hardly anyone, or so it seemed the other day when he was named to take over from Gordon Gibson as leader of the Liberal Party in B.C.

But Jev doesn't mind. Even thinks it's an advantage.

His profile has been so low up to now that when TV reporters went to Cowichan High School (where Jev has worked since 1964) for comments from the students, they had a tough time finding one who'd even heard of him!

That's because Tothill, who once taught science, doesn't teach any more. His work is in television and film-making and, while the graphic communications course he set up there in 1965 is now run by Alex Wilson, Jev operates under the title of educational co-ordinator for the school district. Students in his courses have won three national TV awards for community films.

When I went into Cow High, as the Duncan school is fondly called, I caught Jev Tothill on his birthday. He's 50 now and has to admit he "pulled a Jack Benny" by telling reporters a few days earlier he was 49.

Though Jev appears to have one vital political ingredient missing — he was never a car salesman — he has had a varied background, having worked as a truck driver and a logger before going back to complete his education.

"I was working in a planer mill in North Vancouver when I decided I'd go to UBC and study nutrition," he says "Later, I went to Ottawa to work for the Food and Drug Directorate as an information director."

It was while in that position that Tothill was encouraged by friends to go into teaching.

Once a member of the Cowichan Valley Regional Board representing Cowichan Bay, where he lives with his wife Jerry and children Michelle, 12, and Blair, 10, Jev has long been interested in politics.

"I'd been a non-partisan policitian for years," he says. "Even before I could vote, as a teen-ager, I used to go along to meetings to hear what politicians had to say."

Becoming a partisan politician wasn't an easy decision, he says.

"The night I decided to join the Liberal Party (in March, 1975) I didn't sleep too well," he says. "I was worried about having to follow party policy whatever my own beliefs and about being too regimented.

"But I've since found out this is not a problem; that there is freedom of expression. So my fears were unfounded — and now I don't have to worry because I'm the leader."

The Liberal king without a throne still hasn't decided whether to run in his home riding of Cowichan-Malahat or in one of the two byelections coming up in North Vancouver where he was raised.

Though he is only a weekend politician who'll campaign actively during school holidays, Tothill appears to have all the ingredients for a good full-time one.

There's an easy-going manner, a dash of humor and just the right amount of confidence.

"I'm a slow learner — that's why my children are younger," he quips. "And perhaps that accounts for my late arrival on the political scene."

The fact that he hasn't really arrived anywhere yet (he was defeated in his bid to become an MLA in 1975) doesn't bother him. He will be elected, he says, though he concedes it is in the second provincial election from now that he's looking for the Liberals to really come into their own.

ALREADY PEOPLE are asking the new leader if he feels like the captain of the Titanic. No, he says firmly.

"Because to me it's a real honor to be able to represent the views of the partisan Liberals and also those who have been dragged a little to the right by the Socreds," he says.

"It's an honor and a challenge to bring us back to a more positive role of having more Liberals in the legislature. It's a great chance and I didn't think I'd have it.

"And I don't mind not being a high profile person," he says, "because if I was, a lot more would be expected of me. Now, every bit of improvement the party makes will be more noticeable.

"I want to be measured by performance, not on high profile expectations. Most people don't have high expectations of me now . . . except those who know me!) and I feel that's to my advantage."

Doesn't it bother him a little, though, when fellow staff members greet him with "Jev Who?" No, he says with a grin. And then, referring to Joe Clark's reported bungling of his recent overseas tour, he adds:

"Well, I've never run into a bayonet — and it's a long time since I've run into a door!"

SOUND WAVES captured the interest of Glenlyon student Brian Charlesworth, who took about 90 hours to complete his ambitious project in the school's 10th annual science fair this week. A total of 87 exhibits in science, social studies, art and drama were entered in fair. (John McKay photo)

Careful Growth Wins Support In Cordova Bay

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Most Cordova Bay residents have no objection to population growth provided it is carefully controlled, but they consider it important to keep a large part of Saanich rural.

Those are two of the findings in a survey of the community recently conducted by Saanich planning department, as a preliminary to preparing a detailed area plan for Cordova Bay.

Similar surveys were undertaken throughout the 10 other local areas in Saanich, but those results have yet to be published.

The 16-page Cordova Bay report, rushed out in time for last Thursday's big meeting of area residents and council members, states that 120 households in the Sayward, Ridge and Lochside neighborhoods were sampled by interviewers.

The sample covered about 10 per cent of the total neighborhood household population.

Most residents disagreed that there are already enough people living in Saanich and that further population growth should be discouraged, the report notes.

Of those surveyed 87 per cent agreed with the statement that "population growth is not objectionable if carefully controlled."

But the same proportion felt areas with agriculturally productive soils should be reserved solely for farming, while 75 per cent wanted to see a large portion of Saanich retain its rural character.

Surprisingly, in view of the clamor for sewers at Thursday's hearing, the report concludes that 64.7 per cent of residents consider septic tank disposal adequate, while only 27.7 per cent describe it as inadequate.

Topping the list of shortcomings were bikeways, with 58 per cent of respondents rating them inadequate to very inadequate.

Vandalism was found to be a cause of neighborhood discontent for 43 per cent of residents surveyed.

But on the whole, the report shows, Cordova Bay residents are a placidly contented lot who cherish the quietness and charm of their area.

Natty Thief Nailed

A youth who broke into the shop at the Cedar Hill Golf Club driving range early today had a surprise waiting for him outside — four Saanich police officers.

An officer on patrol spotted him in the shop at about 3 a.m. and radioed for reinforcements.

Officers surrounded the building and watched as the youth tried on an assortment of clothing, stuffing what he didn't wear into a jogging suit bag.

After collecting about $200 worth of attire he crawled out a broken window, into the arms of the policemen.

Gloomy Outlook for Eclipse

Chances for sunshine are slim with or without the solar eclipse Monday.

The outlook along the Pacific Coast and for much of the interior is for clouds and showers as part of the weather system which brought rain today and Friday.

Eclipse observers may be disappointed along much of the path of totality which falls on North America starting about the mouth of the Columbia River shortly after 8 a.m. and curves northeast through the northern states, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and northern Ontario.

The regional weather office said current coastal conditions are likely to be still around Monday because the system is moving inland slowly.

Victoria lies a few miles north of the path of total eclipse, but at its peak the moon will obscure 98 per cent of the sun from this geographical point.

The partial eclipse starts about 7:11, an hour before the darkest part of the shadow falls.

School children in Greater Victoria District 61 have the option of going to school an hour early, or waiting until after the eclipse before attending classes. In Saanich and Sooke districts, classes will start late.

Greater Victoria chairman Carol Pickup said all schools in her district will open early and TV equipment will be set up so children can view the phenomenon safely under teacher supervision, weather permitting.

She said this would accommodate working parents who could not wait to see their children to school later than 9 a.m. Those whose parents will be at home may wish to keep their children and send them to classes following the eclipse.

Under no circumstances should anyone attempt to view the eclipse by looking directly at the sun because of the risk of damage to the optic nerve.

Despite suggestions that the eclipse may be viewed through a piece of fully exposed, developed photographic film, or the darkest grade of lens for welding goggles, neither is recommended by experts.

"I think it would be hazardous," said eye specialist Dr. D.P. North.

He said the pinhole camera is the best method of viewing an eclipse. It carries no risk because the viewer looks at an image projected on a white wall, board or screen by solar rays focussed through a pinhole in a piece of carboard held in line with the sun.

Eight Arrested, Policemen Hurt

Two policemen were injured and eight persons carted off to jail Friday night after Saanich police broke up a noisy party at a home at 1558 Arrow.

Constable Doug Weidman sprained his ankle and Constable Jeff Wilde received face scratches and a bruised hand when a scuffle erupted as police attempted to put two persons in the police wagon. Weidman was taken to hospital for X-rays.

A police spokesman said an 18 and a 21-year-old have been charged with assaulting a police officer. They were released from jail this morning on promise to appear in provincial court March 15.

Six others taken into custody for being drunk were also released this morning. No charges were laid against them.

The spokesman said officers seized 10 dozen cases of beer and a number of bottles of liquor after breaking up the party attended by 50 youths.

The disturbance was one of several Saanich police were called to quieten overnight but the only one that ended in injury or arrests.

ID Cards Issued By UVic Group

Householders suspicious of university door-to-door researchers can now ask to see official identification issued by the University of Victoria committee on research.

Chairman and dean of graduate studies Dr. John Dewey said the new cards and identity numbers are to counteract fraudulent representation which has occurred here in the past five years.

A recent example was a person purporting to be a UVic researcher asking women to supply intimate information in a telephone questionnaire.

"This kind of activity would not be approved by this university," the committee chairman said.

Several times a year the university receives reports of people being inconvenienced, embarrassed or frightened by research frauds claiming to be faculty or students.

Banks Spending to 'Stave Off the Inevitable'

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The woman in charge of the national drive to organize bank employees says the banks are "going to fight to the death" to prevent their workers from becoming union members.

However, Laraine Singler told a news conference Friday the banks are "spending a great deal of money to stave off the inevitable."

Singler, who was seconded from the B.C. Government Employees Union to become national director of the bank workers' organizing committee, was in Victoria to help launch an intensive organizing drive in the area.

The drive began Thursday with members of other unions handing out Union of Bank Employees' leaflets to bank workers as they were leaving their jobs.

The union will also have people staffing phones this weekend and next, as well as during the week to answer any questions bank workers might have.

There was a similar campaign in Vancouver this week and Singler said it likely will be repeated in other areas.

She said there is a great deal of interest by bank workers in the union's activities but there is also a great deal of fear.

"They are afraid of being fired from the bank if they show any interest in the union," she said, or, what happens more frequently, of being harassed by management until they are forced to quit.

At a time of nine or 10 per cent unemployment in Canada, the effect of such psychological warfare is just as bad as the physical attacks that took place during labor's initial stages to organize workers, she said.

The purpose behind the leafletting, she said, is to let bank workers know that members of other unions in the area will stand behind them and support their fight.

Singler said there are about 50 bank branches which have so far been organized either through the Canadian Labor Congress' Union of Bank Employees or through other unions such as the United Steelworkers of America or the Office and Technical Employees Union.

There are four union certified branches in B.C., including the Quadra and Cook branch of the Bank of Montreal in Victoria.

Singler admits that in the settlements reached so far with banks there have been no earth-shaking wage increases nor substantial improvements in fringe benefits.

But for the bank employees the important thing is that whatever benefits they have are written down in a contract, she said.

There now are proper procedures for promotions and transfers, for example, and these things are not just subject to the whims of a manager.

Singler said the national average yearly wage for bank tellers is under $10,000 a year at a time when bank profits are at an all-time high.

In 1978, bank workers' salaries increased an average 5.5 per cent.

In the same year bank profits went up 33.2 per cent.

Banks' profits per employee, according to the latest statistics for 1975, are about double what they are in the manufacturing industry, she said.

Singler said she doesn't feel the banks' fight against the union is a question of money.

"It is more a question of them preferring to run an industry in an autocratic fashion.

"They prefer the authoritarian approach and they don't want to have that challenged.

"The union, on the other hand, means democracy in the work place."

VIKINGS RETAIN HOPES

SASKATOON — University of Victoria Vikings continue to cling to hopes of a Canada West University Athletic Association volleyball championship and a berth in the national final.

Vikings defeated UBC Thunderbirds 15-8, 9-15, 15-13, 15-10 Friday but bowed to front-running Saskatchewan, 15-11, 15-7, 15-10, to remain in second place in the men's standings.

Victories over Alberta and Calgary in final matches today would send the Vikings against Saskatchewan in the CWUAA final tonight.

Victoria's Vikettes, beaten 15-6, 15-10, 15-12 by Alberta in their only game Friday, have been eliminated from the women's playoff.

Gulls Advance Against Braves

Juan de Fuca Gulls didn't ignore the opportunity.

But almost.

Trailing 5-4, Gulls punched home the last three goals Friday to edge Esquimalt Legion 7-5 and qualify for the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League final.

Victory moved Gulls one point ahead of Fuller Lake Flyers and sends Juan de Fuca against defending-champion Saanich Braves in the best-of-seven championship series that opens Tuesday at Pearkes Arena.

Ross Anderson and Steve Saunders each scored twice for Gulls, who unleashed 63 shots at Esquimalt goalie Ron Allan. Mike Adamek, Mark Selva and Rick Milligan rounded out Juan de Fuca's total while Terry Parsons, with two, Ron Brooks, Russ Kennedy and Mark Ekstrom replied for Legion.

Gulls' goalie Peter Adamek made 32 stops.

Jane Bags Six Birds For Best-Ever Tally

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Defending-champion Jane Blalock made six birdies Friday for a six-under-par 66 — her personal low on the Ladies' Professional Golf Association tour — in the first round of the $75,000 Orange Blossom tournament.

Blalock's score also matched the course and tournament record, first set by Jackie Pung in the late 1950s and equalled by Sandra Post in 1975.

Although she has won more than 20 tournaments in her career, Blalock had never previously finished a tournament round under 67.

Two strokes back in second place after Friday's round was Connie Chillemi of Silver Springs, Fla., whose best finish in three years as a pro was fifth. She's won $9,380 during her career.

Chillemi had five birdies and four bogeys, then scored an eagle on the 18th hole for a 68.

Four golfers were tied for third place at 69: Julie Stranger, Dale Lundquist, Jerilyn Britz and Kathy McMullen. At 70 were Post, Donna Young and Betsy King.

Cathy Sherk of Ontario, in her second pro event, carded 37-37—74 and Dale Shaw of Victoria was 40-38—78.

Last year's top money winner, Nancy Lopez, skipped the event because of tendinitis.

Blalock admitted she was thinking about big things this season.

"If I said my goal was not to be No. 1, I'd be lying," she said. "Each of the past three winters I've overcome a major weakness. Now I enjoy it so much I can't wait to play."

She said she didn't get her hopes up when she realized she might card a personal record.

"I've had rounds going like this before and blew it on the last hole," she said. "But I took a chance and went over some trees. I had to hit two perfect shots and I hit two perfect shots."

Fuzzy Puts Fun Into Golf Game

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller plays golf for both money and enjoyment, chats with members of the gallery and sometimes keeps his playing partners loose.

The latest fellow pro enjoying the outgoing Fuzzy happens also to be the only man ahead of him in the $250,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open golf tournament, Lon Hinkle.

"Fuzzy is a character and he keeps everybody loose and you have more fun," said Hinkle, who played the first two rounds of the LA Open in a threesome with his friend Zoeller.

And after 36 holes of the 72-hole event, Hinkle leads with a six-under-par 136 and right behind him at 137 comes Fuzzy. It should also be pointed out that Zoeller and Hinkle are one-two on the PGA money winning list for 1979 and each has captured an event this year.

Zoeller, the 27-year-old champion of the Andy Williams-San Diego Open, has won $83,045 this year and Hinkle, winner of the Big Crosby in a playoff, stands at $69,538.

"I enjoy playing golf, it's not work for me," said Zoeller, who hails from New Albany, Ind., and still lives there. "I like to have the people paying the gate have a little fun, too. Without them, we wouldn't have a tournament.

"I've got a lot of respect for fellows like Chi Chi Rodriguez and Lee Trevino who have fun on the course. I think the younger players should loosen up more. That would help their game and help the game itself.

"I'm still Fuzzy. I've put more money in the bank but I haven't changed."

He was christened Frank Urban Zoeller, but even before his memory they put his initials together to get FUZ and went on to his current nickname.

Hinkle was eight under-par until the final six holes when he carded a pair of bogeys.

"I played the first 12 holes like a champ and the last six like a chump," he commented.

Among the Canadians in the field, Dave Barr of Kelowna made the cut with a second-round score of 72 for 145. Dan Halldorson of Brandon shot a 71 for 146. George Knudson of Toronto missed the cut with a 76 for 148, as did Jim Nelford of Burnaby with an 80 in the first round, and a 70 in the second for 150.

If Oak Bay coach Tom Holmes is looking for an extra advantage, he may find it in the psychological carryover from a Friday surprise.

Sparked by Sue Chowen and Tracy Warman, the Bays night have acquired extra confidence as they advanced to the Vancouver Island high school girls' basketball final by toppling defending-champion Reynolds Roadrunners 56-48.

The Bays thus face Mt. Douglas Ramblers, unbeaten by a Victoria-area team this season, in the title game at Spectrum tonight, starting at 8:15 p.m.

The favored Ramblers, getting 15 points from Diana Thornton, bounced Courtenay Towhees out of the running, 51-35.

In other games, Victoria High Tigers defeated Nanaimo 43-32 and Cowichan beat Port Alberni 38-28.

Warman led Oak Bay scoring with 19 points but it was Chowen, scoring most of her 13 points in a second-half comeback, who turned things around for the Bays and nullified Karen McComber's outstanding 34-point performance for Reynolds.

Pro Booters Favor Strike

There's a strong possibility that the players may strike the North American Soccer League next month.

Members of the players union are voting now, with the mood running nearly 3-1 in favor of a work stoppage at the start of the regular season scheduled for March 24. Ballots from the NASL Players' Association headquarters in Washington went out nearly two weeks ago and are to be returned by March 10. The vote thus far is 46-16 in favor of a strike.

With 93 per cent of the players favoring a union, the dispute centres around the NASL's refusal to recognize a union or negotiate a collective bargaining agreement.

Panthers Provide Proof of Power

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Parkland Panthers made believers out of everybody Friday night.

The Panthers, who swept through the Greater Victoria high school boys' basketball schedule without a loss, confirmed their championship status by beating Mt. Douglas Rams 73-68 in the South Island playoff final before an overflow crowd at UVic's old gymnasium.

The victory gives the Panthers first seeding among the four South Island schools going to the Island "AA" playoffs, next Thursday through Saturday at Nanaimo's Malaspina College. Mt. Doug gets second seeding.

Third place in the south goes to Oak Bay Bays, who got a 45-point scoring performance from Wayne Andrews to whip Belmont Braves 93-65 in Friday's other playoff contest.

Parkland, Mt. Doug, Oak Bay and Belmont join four up-island schools to determine the Island representatives in the B.C. championships in Vancouver next month.

As the top-seeded team in the south, Panthers will draw the fourth-place team from the north in next weekend's first round. Mt. Doug meets the third-place northern representative, Oak Bay goes against the second-place northern finisher while Belmont meets the north's top seed, probably Nanaimo Islanders.

"I don't think anybody believed it when we won the league," Parkland coach Joe Milligan said after Friday's well-played contest. "They seemed to think it was a joke. They were saying that Oak Bay (the perennial champion until this year) lost, not that we won."

Milligan's gang is no joke. Despite the fact that there are fewer than 200 grade 11 and 12 students at Parkland and only 10 youngsters showed up for the basketball team last fall, Panthers proved they belonged.

One of the believers is Mt. Doug coach Rick Humber.

"They've got an excellent ball club," he agreed. "They're well coached. They've got everything going for them."

Everything includes every player on the team, from six-foot-nine Greg Wiltjer (28 points Friday) to guard Dexter Williams, the shortest man on the squad and the one that Humber figured hurt the Rams the most.

"He was great in pressure situations, especially under the boards," Humber said. He also scored 11 points.

Panthers' other big gun, Quinn Groenhyde, counted 18 points but missed much of the second half after picking up a fourth foul just after the intermission. Panthers proved they had the depth to cope without him.

Russ Thornton was a standout for the Rams. Quick on the floor, he also sparkled with a 27-point scoring effort. Brian Alexander added 12 for the losers.

Oak Bay coach Dave Morgan let his Bays go to a fast break that the Braves couldn't catch.

"They (Belmont) let Andrews get the ball inside," Morgan explained. "We could see that right off the bat so I just told the players to give it to him."

They did and he just kept popping it in.

The night before, when the Bays downed Spectrum 73-50 in preliminary play, Morgan tried the fast break for the first time this season.

"We man-to-manned them all night and the kids really enjoyed it. They're scrappy and quick. It was my mistake in not letting them use the fast break sooner."

Morgan confirmed he may go to it again next weekend if the situation calls for it.

Hugh Turner was Bays' second-high scorer with 15 points. Tom Raine was the only Brave to reach double figures. He scored 20.

GRENOBLE, France (AP) — Beth Heiden of the United States broke two world records today, in the 500 and 1,500-meter women's races, at the world junior speedskating championships.

Heiden, who won the women's world senior championship three weeks ago and then finished second for senior sprint title, finished the 1,500 race in two minutes, 13.57 seconds after winning the 500 in 43.23 seconds.

Bjoerg Eva Jensen of Norway was second in the 1,500 and Irina Kovrova of the Soviet Union followed Heiden in 500.

Craig Kressler of the U.S. won the men's 500 race with a time of 40.03, ahead of Andreas Ehrig of East Germany, 40.24.

Cougar Wingers Flap Their Best At Bruins

The Western Hockey League argument tonight in Memorial Arena is for second place in the Western Division, and Victoria Cougar coach Jack Shupe looks to the wings for success.

"We always look best when our wingers are on the bit," Shupe said. "And I don't know why it is, but the wingers seem to play especially well against New Westminster."

Which, as it happens, is the team holding down second and is scheduled to engage the Cougars tonight.

The Cougars, a point behind, have won eight and lost four of their meetings with Bruins this year. It is the first time Victoria has ever achieved such superiority over New Westminster since entering the major junior league wars.

And, as Shupe sees it, a big reason for previous success has come from the wings.

"Torrie (Robertson) got a game-winning goal for us in New Westminster a few weeks ago. In the past four or five games, (Mike) Shields hasn't missed scoring a point against the Bruins. And Randy Irving (traded to Victoria in exchange for Rob Clavette) seems to play his best against his old club.

"All the players really seem to get up for games with New Westminster, but it is especially so with the wingers.

"And that's what we need. When the wingers are doing their job, the team plays its best games."

And on the subject of wingers, Shupe is pleased with the recent performances of Shields. The six-foot, 190-pounder has scored five goals and 10 assists in the last 12 games, an improvement over his inconsistency in the first 44 games when he managed only 12 goals and 21 assists.

The Bruins moved ahead of Victoria in the standings by edging the stubborn Seattle Breakers 4-3 Friday on Dave Orleski's goal at 18:08 of the final period.

In other games Friday, Portland Winter Hawks padded their first-place hold by defeating Calgary Wranglers 5-2 while in Saskatoon, the Blades tripped Regina Pats 6-3.

Vikette Coach Praises Bench

Times News Services

Victoria Vikettes' solid and winning performance over the Dinnies may have startled some of the fans in Calgary, but it didn't rate as a big surprise with Kathy Shields.

Coach of the Vikettes, Shields credited "excellent contribution from the bench" as a major factor in Victoria's 66-59 triumph Friday in Calgary that provided the Vancouver Island team with a 1-0 lead in the Canada West University Athletic Association women's basketball championship series.

Second game in the best-of-three final is scheduled tonight. Should Calgary win, the third and deciding game will be played Sunday.

All games are being played in Calgary.

Although rookie sensation Jane Favelli returned to Victoria's lineup, Shields glossed over the play of the backup crew, particularly Janis Turner, Sue Shaw, Cindy Smith and Tracy McAra.

The four combined to contribute 29 points in addition to providing solid defensive play that handcuffed the league-winning Dinnies.

Victoria's balance and depth made it easy for Luanne Hebb and Michelle Belanger to make their usual contributions. Hebb, the league's leading scorer, fired 18 points while Belanger added 12. Turner scored 11 for her best-ever playoff total.

Holly Jackson Pedersen and Laura Buehning each scored 13 for Calgary, which split its four games with Victoria this season.

Teams were tied 29-29 at the half.

Favelli, runaway scoring leader until she injured a knee before Christmas, got into the lineup with a brace supporting her injured knee but saw only limited action and scored three points.

UVic Vikings, with first place already assured, held off a fierce, last-minute rally by Alberta to post a 74-73 decision in Edmonton and thwart the Golden Bears' hopes of clinching a men's playoff berth.

Alberta now must win tonight's season-closing match in order to advance to the men's final against the Vikings.

Calgary's Dinosaurs, also in the running for second spot, kept the pressure on Alberta by defeating Lethbridge Pronghorns 90-83 for their eighth straight victory.

In another men's matchup, a meaningless one, UBC Thunderbirds defeated Saskatchewan Huskies 88-81.

In Edmonton, Vikings bounced into a 45-36 half-time lead but poor execution on offense almost cost them the victory. Only some solid defensive play and rebounding by Vikings kept Alberta from pulling it out of the fire.

Ahead by five points with a minute left, Vikings saw the margin reduced to one. A blocked shot by rookie Gerald Kazanowski with 10 seconds remaining and a desperation missed shot by Alberta's Brent Patterson at the buzzer saved Vikings.

Vikings picked off 19 offensive rebounds and 17 on defence while Alberta grabbed 27 rebounds.

Kazanowski, who scored 11 points, picked off 13 of Victoria's 36 rebounds.

Ted Anderson, continuing to show the hot hand he has displayed in recent games, paced Victoria's scorers with 18 points while guard Robbie Parris added 16 and Reni Dolcetti 14.

Score a Big Point For the Organizers

BRANDON (CP) — Organizers of the Canada Winter Games were chuckling today at the expense of those who criticized the official point standing which determines the championship of the competition.

Thanks to the point scoring formula, Quebec and Ontario squared off in the women's basketball final, the last event of the Games, with the overall title hanging on the outcome.

Even though Quebec had won 46 gold medals to Ontario's 20 and had a 92-72 lead in the total medal count, the point tabulation gave the two provinces identical totals of 176.5.

The scoring system awards points on a 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3 system to the top eight provinces in a sport. Ninth place is worth 2.5 and scores descend by half-points thereafter, so that the last-place team still receives a point.

So Quebec's near-sweep in weightlifting netted it only a one-point edge over second-place Ontario, while Ontario picked up 3½ points in return by finishing sixth in men's curling while Quebec placed 11th.

That was the kind of thing that was happening to La Belle Province all day Friday.

The Quebecois won 14 gold medals to Ontario's 11 on the last full day of competition, including four by Yves Dion of Ste. Foy in men's gymnastics and a sweep of team and all three individual medals in sabre fencing. But the loss of the team gold in racketball, late in the evening, chipped away the last of the four-point lead Quebec had held over Ontario at the start of the day.

Other provinces had their moments of glory on a day that saw 41 gold medals awarded, including 10 in wrestling and nine in the individual segments of the racketball tournament.

Among the medal-winners were Victoria's Leanne Smith and Brad Forth, who won a bronze in the pre-novice pairs competition.

Art Noseworthy of St. John's failed in his attempt to bring Newfoundland its first gold medal of the current Games when his rink lost 4-2 to Manitoba's Kerry Burtnyk in the men's curling final. But Christine and Dominic Pike, also of St. John's, did the job instead by winning the junior dance title in figure skating.

The Yukon's gold-medal hopes in women's curling ended early in the day when Cindy Duncan lost her semi-final game 5-4 to Colleen Jones of Halifax, whose rink subsequently bowed to Denise Lavigne of Moncton in the final.

Figure skating honors were well spread. Besides the Pikes' victory in the junior dance, Diane Ogibowski of Minnedosa, Man., won the novice women's singles, Todd Zaharko of Delta was the pre-novice men's champion and the Quebec tandem of Julie Brault and Richard Gauthier won the pre-novice pairs.

New Brunswick and Quebec split the last two judo classes, Kevin Burchill of Newcastle, N.B., winning at 71 kilos while Mario Laroche of Asbestos, Que., took the heavyweight title.

Ontario took the three heaviest classes and four over-all in wrestling to edge British Columbia, which had three champions. Quebec had only one gold but finished third in the competition on the strength of one silver and four bronzes.

Loukes' Shot Sinks Central

They needed some last-minute heroics to pull it off, but Lansdowne boys retained supremecy over Lower Vancouver Island junior high school basketball rivals Friday.

Jeff Loukes climaxed a stirring last-minute comeback by connecting for the winning basket a fraction of a second before the buzzer sounded to provide Lansdowne with a 58-56 victory over Central and its ninth championship in 10 years.

Loukes and Danny Godfrey both finished with 16 points to share Lansdowne scoring honors while Shawn Dheenshaw (16) and Ryan Campbell (15) paced Central in the final at Lansdowne.

Oak Bay placed third in the Lower Island tournament by defeating Cedar Hill 44-40 while Arbutus was fourth following a 57-48 victory over Colquitz. Oak Bay and Arbutus will play off to determine the Lower Island's third and final representative in the Island championship.

Dave Whittaker (17) paced Oak Bay's victory while Jerry Chang and Phil Ekstedt, each with 10, topped Cedar Hill. Dean Stokkeland was Arubuts' big gun with 18 while Cal Vanbuskirk matched that total for Colquitz.

Only North Island Had Tough Battle

Stelly's Stingers, Dunsmuir Demons and Claremont Spartans made it look easy but North Island, the only winner from outside the Greater Victoria area, had a tight squeeze in Friday's first-round games in the Vancouver Island high school boys' "A" basketball championship tournament at Stelly's.

The North Island squad went down to the wire to edge Shawnigan 71-69.

The host Stingers, sparked by Derek Peters' 24 points, tripped Brentwood College 67-53, Dunsmuir beat Chemainus 62-49 and the Spartans overwhelmed Reynolds Roadrunners 62-37.

Play resumed this morning and the tournament will wind up with the championship final at 9 tonight.

A REMINDER FOR FRANCE

MOSCOW (AFP) — The Soviet Organizing Committee for the 1980 Olympic Games has decided to remind France of the consequences which may arise from it allowing a South African rugby tour to take place this summer.

Soviet authorities fear a Montreal-style boycott of their Games by African countries, who stayed away from the 1976 Olympics because of New Zealand's rugby ties with South Africa.

Guidolin Finds a Way To Remain Optimist

By Canadian Press

Aldo Guildolin is the eternal optimist.

Guildolin, as coach of Colorado Rockies of the National Hockey League, has every right to be knocking on suicide's door.

Friday night his club took it on the chin for the ninth consecutive game — this time a 5-3 loss against Philadelphia Flyers.

But, in the dressing room, Guidolin refused to be downcast and surprisingly expressed confidence in the future.

Asked about the Rockies' playoff chances, Guidolin acknowledged the team's 15-game deficit behind second-place Vancouver in the Smythe Division, but added: "Realistically, we're not out of it yet."

In the lone other NHL contest Minnesota North Stars came from behind to tie Atlanta Flames 2-2.

Down the hall, Philadelphia Flyers were rejoiced at the victory over the Rockies — the Flyers' first road win since Jan. 9.

Veteran centre Bobby Clarke shook his head at the Rockies' record: "I'm sure it's discouraging to be so far out of a playoff spot."

"You've got to give them a lot of credit," said Flyer defenseman JimWatson. "They always play us tough here."

If not a tough game, the Rockies at least provided competition for the Flyers. The third period opened with a 2-2 tie, then Reggie Leach scored his 25th goal of the season. Al Hill added a goal at 9:10 that beat Colorado goalie Michel Plasse to make it 4-2.

The Rockies' Ron Delorme put in a rebound of his own shot at 10:52, but Philadelphia came back 26 seconds later when Tom Gorence reestablished the two-goal margin.

Philadelphia had opened the scoring on a first-period power-play goal by Bill Barber, but goals by Merlin Malinowski and Wilf Paiement pulled the Rockies even after two periods.

Yes, said Guidolin, "This was a tough one to lose." The Rockies' next game was two days away — in Detroit. Guidolin already was looking forward to it.

"We're going to turn it around in Detroit on Sunday," he said.

"A tie with a team the caliber of Atlanta is good, especially if you come from behind," said Glen Sonnor, Norths Stars coach.

Steve Payne scored on Greg Smith's rebound in the third period to lift the North Stars to their 2-2 tie.

The game tied the Flames with New York Rangers for second place in the Patrick Division, both with 70 points.

Minnesota scored the only first-period goal when rookie Bobby Smith deflected Brad Maxwell's right point shot past Atlanta goalie Dan Bouchard. Atlanta's Ken Houston tied it 1-1 midway through the second period on Bob Murdoch's rebound.

The Flames took the lead 2-1 when Bobby Lalonde fired a 12-footer over North Star goalie Gilles Meloche's left shoulder. Payne's game-tying shot came at 11:02 in the third.

FIVE-GAME SUSPENSION

MONTREAL (CP) — Defenceman Steve Durbano of St. Louis Blues has been suspended for five games for his part in an altercation with Nick Fotiu of New York Rangers in a National Hockey League game Wednesday night.

Brian O'Neill, NHL executive vice-president, reviewed written reports of the incident at league headquarters, heard testimony from the principals and watched videotapes of the altercation.

Durbano was assessed a match penalty for an attempt to injure as well as a 10-minute misconduct penalty and two game misconducts. Fotiu received a 10-minute misconduct and a game misconduct.

Durbano received $450 in automatic fines. O'Neill announced a $300 fine against Fotiu for being the instigator in addition to $150 in automatic fines.

The incident took place after a Blues goal in the third period of the game at New York. Durbano said he was punched by Fotiu when Fotiu left the penalty box after the goal.

Durbano retaliated by swinging his stick, but it was not determined whether he connected. When referee Bryan Lewis told Durbano he was being assessed a match penalty, Durbano became angry, again fought with Fotiu and both players received game miscondcuts for continuing the altercation.

Bullets Shoot Down DataTech in Opener

VANCOUVER — Fraser Valley Bullets and Vancouver Puccinis won first-round games Friday in the double-loss tournament to decide the British Columbia senior men's basketball champion.

Puccinis beat Prince Rupert, last year's provincial senior "B" champions, 104-79, but the first-round surprise was Bullets' embarassingly-easy 104-75 handling of Victoria, a team that had been expected to be a major threat in the title showdown.

Bill Robinson and Ken McKenzie, two former members of Canada's national team, scored 29 and 28 points, respectively, while Gary Smith added 18 for the Bullets, who jumped to a 48-31 halftime lead.

Varick Cutler scored 22 points for Victoria while Dave Mulcahy got 16 and Billy Loos fired 12.

McKenzie and six-foot-10 Kirk Rhanda helped Bullets, the defending champions, control the backboards. Some erratic Victoria shooting helped Fraser Valley's dominate the game.

Steve Pettifer, who won the Dogwood League scoring title this season, led Puccinis with 26 points and Jan Bohn and Stu Graham added 18 and 12. Jim Ciccone scored 18 and John Braun added 17 as Prince Rupert trailed 44-41 at halftime.

Fraser Valley went against Puccinis and Victoria met Prince Rupert when play resumed today.

The tournament final is scheduled for 9 a.m. Sunday with a playoff, if necessary, at 4:30 p.m.

English League Cuts Off Loans To NASL Teams

LONDON (Reuter) — English League soccer clubs will not be allowed to loan players to North American Soccer League clubs until the end of the English season, league vice-president Dick Wragg has announced.

The English season should finish early in May but it is certain to be extended because of the backlog of games brought about by the severe weather.

"No club will be allowed to release a player to go to America until our season's fixtures are finished and that means a fixture of any club loaning a player," Wragg said.

At present almost 30 players, either on permanent transfer or by loan, are committed to playing in the NASL.

At $1000* off '78 Saab Turbo is the perfect car for both of you.

Now you can harness the total driving experience of a Saab Turbo at $1000* off the manufacturer's maximum suggested retail price. But only while the supply of 1978 models lasts.

Around town, Saab Turbo has the look, the comfort and the practicality that speaks of your success. On the open road, the other you takes command of Saab's "turbo-charged freedom".

What is "turbo-charged freedom"? Step on the gas and you'll know exactly what we mean. Added acceleration and increased power when you want it. Basically, turbo-charging generates more energy during each piston stroke which results in more engine torque and greater horsepower. But Saab's turbo-charger only runs when it is needed. During normal driving, the Saab Turbo engine runs as a conventional gas-saving, fuel-injected engine. Ask us for the complete story on turbo-charging.

Of course, Saab Turbo also offers all the design and construction features that have made Saab an engineering marvel.

When one of you wants distinction and the other craves adventure, Saab Turbo is the perfect car for both of you. Especially now.

Discover the savings on all 1978 Saab models. For example, as little as $7999 will put you in a Saab 99GL 2-door. This is an opportunity neither of you will want to pass up. Take a test drive now.

Reduced manufacturer's suggested maximum list price on the Saab 99GL 2-door $7999.
Dealer preparation, freight, license and taxes may be extra.

Why?
Because he knows how many people in B.C. last year were killed behind the wheel of their car.
He also knows that one of the ways to help reduce that number is to make sure your car is safe—that spotting that loose wheel now could prevent you from being killed by it later.
Len feels that what he does isn't just a job—it's a responsibility. If there's something wrong with your car he wants to find out about it now.
Before you find out about it later by accident.
Len Abbot is just one of the more than 43,000 members of the B.C. Government Employees' Union working for you all over the Province.
At all kinds of jobs.
Under all kinds of working conditions.
All people whose skill, experience and dedication have made our provincial public employees among the most efficient anywhere in North America today.
And that's something to be proud of.

Olympic Games in Moscow

Sears Handles Travel

The Olympic Trust of Canada has appointed Simpsons Travel Service the exclusive official ticket and travel organizer in Canada for the summer Olympic Games to be held in Moscow July 19-August 3.

Manager of Sears Travel Service in Victoria, Noreen Tiffin, says: "Because of the complexities of travelling to and within Russia, inclusive travel packages are essential for all Canadian visitors to the games."

The Olympiad Tours packages offer:

- Return air transportation;
- Accommodation, economy, tourist or first-class hotels;
- All meals in Russia;
- Selected sightseeing;
- At least five tickets to Olympic events.

The total ticket allocation allowing for five tickets per person will give about 8,000 Canadians the opportuity to attend the Games.

Because of the expected influx of visitors to Moscow and the shortgage of accommodation, the stay in Moscow is limited to a maximum of seven days. The packages offer tours of two and three weeks duration, which give visitors the opportunity to see other parts of the country on a pre-arranged basis for either one or two weeks, depending on the duration of the package. Itineraries are also planned to allow for two weeks in Russia and one week in Eastern or Western Europe, to give travellers the opportunity to take full advantage of their trip to Europe.

Ms. Tiffin said interest in the tours across Canada has been very good, with more than 70 per cent of the 8,000 places allocated to Canada already under deposit. "It is recommended that potential visitors to the games make their reservations as soon as possible," she said.

The cost of the packages will differ, depending on the type of the tour. The price lists are now being prepared and will be available next month.

Now the Hotel Georgia's Great Getaway is available any two nights of the week.

THE GREAT GETAWAY

Derbyshire's Great Show

Blackpool Tower, an airport with taxi-ing planes, a working fairground and a motor racing circuit visitors can operate themselves: these are among the attractions at Gulliver's Kingdom, a world in miniature, at Matlock Bath in Derbyshire.

Local sights such as Riber Castle and the Crich Tramway Museum; a replica of an oil refinery; and a miniature railway can also be found on the four-acre site which will be open to visitors from May to October. Facilities also include a picnic area with views over the Matlock Bath Valley, and an adventure playground.

The 19th century spa and inland resort of Matlock Bath (144 miles north of London) makes a good centre for exploring the Derbyshire Dales and the Peak District.

Stuttgart, a Surprising City

By PHILIP SOUSA

STUTTGART — Why, I asked the young woman at the tourist office, do you call this a "surprising" city?

"To start with," she replied as she handed me a map, "54.6 percent of it is gardens, vineyards, parks and wooded spaces."

A display of that German penchant for precision, her figures. But it was tempered by her warm smile and friendly attitude. Thus, minutes after my arrival here I had had a taste of the Stuttgarters' peculiar and refreshing ability to be at once efficient and personable.

Outside the tourist office I opened the map. Starting with the central railroad station in front of which I stood, I let my eyes travel in ever-larger cirles up to the hills that wrap Stuttgart around in all but one direction, and to the valleys and mountains beyond.

Couldn't come up with 54.6 or any other exact percentage. But it was obvious that the map's printer had had to use us much green ink for the open spaces as he had carrot red for the buildings.

A surprise, indeed, considering that this is a metropolis of almost 700,000 people and that it is an industrial powerhouse within which thrive such major enterprises as the Mercedes Benz and Porsche automobile factories, the Zeiss optical products emporium and several other renowned manufacturing concerns.

As if to validate this dichotomy of industrial might and open spaces, the neat grid of a vineyard caught my eye as I stood in the heart of the modern downtown section doing my map-studying. Distance from my eyes to the first row of grapes; less than three blocks.

A little research and some sight-seeing uncovered several other pleasant surprises.

The vineyards on the slopes overlooking the business district, for instance, are neither tourist office props nor the indulgence of wealthy Stuttgarters. Fact is, this region ranks third among Germany's wine-producing areas.

Why then, I wondered, have I never encountered some of the fine local wines in America or for that matter, elsewhere in Europe?

Stuttgarters, many of them told me, keep most of the stuff for themselves and share the rest with Germans elsewhere. "Somewhat," one of them said, "like you do in California."

If pockets and swaths of green are one of this city's features, diversity in architectural styles is not far behind.

Fascinating modern structures designed by the likes of Le Corbusier and Mies van der Rohe rise near, side by side and at times over Renaissance ducal palaces and Gothic churches.

Among the former, the three-auditorium Liederhall — an asymetrial block whose body of concrete and glass is brightened and softened by lots of mosaic and glazed brick — is an outstanding example.

Reminders of Stuttgart's passage through the centuries are mostly grouped around Schillerplatz, a square that for all appearances never left the middle of the 16th Century.

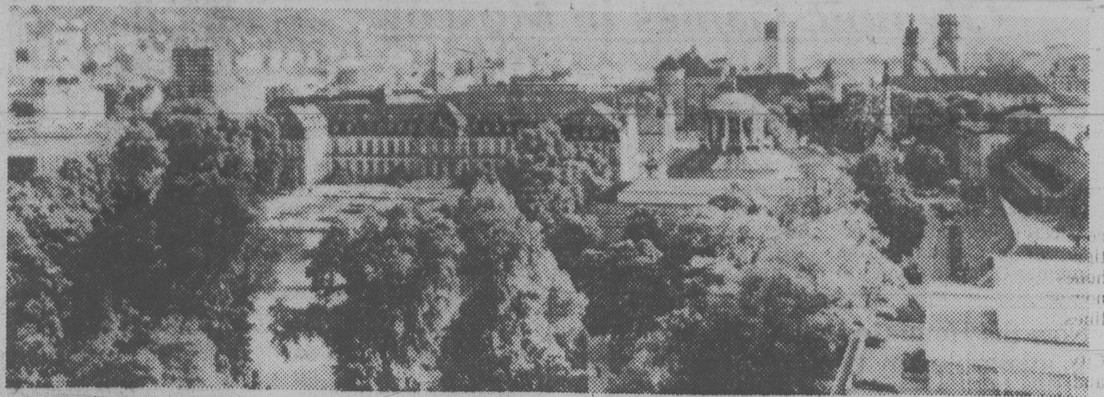
Now the museum of the state of Baden-Wuerttemberg, of which this town is the capital, the Altes Schloss or Old Castle, is the square's most impressive and important structure.

Built as a moated castle in the 13th Century and rebuilt 300 years ago, it encloses a three-tier Renaissnce gallery in which are displayed the museum's priceless medieval and other ancient art objects.

Visitor facilities abound and range the gamut from budget to first class, with the majority in the latter rank.

Not a surprising state of affairs considering that the city's calendar is crowded the year-round with industrial fairs, trade shows and business seminars.

The town's location on the Neckar River, the area's abundance of mineral springs, the sylvan Swabian countryside just beyond the suburbs and the proximity of such Neckar Valley attractions as medieval Tuebingen and romantic Heidelberg are other reasons behind Stuttgart's popularity as a holiday destination.



SHADED CITY—Swaths of green and pleasant, shaded squares are an outstanding feature of central Stuttgart. There is also diversity of architectural styles, with modern structures beside Renaissance ducal palaces and Gothic churches.

Scotland's Exciting Waters

The west coast of Scotland and the Western Isles offer some of the most exciting waters for sailing enthusiasts.

One company, Sailboat VacationsScotland gives visitors the chance to explore some of the thousand miles of coastline from the Isle of Skye in the north, to the Mull of Kintyre in the south. Their two vacational programs offer inclusive sailing cruises for newcomers to sailing, and bareboat or crewed charter for experienced sailors.

Sailboat Vacations Scotland, based at Stroul Bay, Clynder, Dunbartonshire, run a fleet of luxury sailboats, all equipped in excess of Royal Ocean Club offshore standards. Rates are about $150 per person aweek plus the sailboat price, depending on the size of boat and the time of year ($1180 for a seven berth from June to August, for example). The price is inclusive of full provisioning for self-catering; first and last nights ashore in a first-class hotel, andtransport between Clynder and local airports or railway stations. Each yacht is provided with a qualified skipper-guide.

New Honeymoon Tours

Romantic Attractions in Mexico

LOS ANGELES — Mexico's most romantic attractions are featured in the new honeymoon tour programs now offered by Western Airlines.

Cosmopolitan Mexico City, colonial Guadalajara and beach-oriented Acapulco are the featured destinations. Each has its own special flavor.

Some of Mexico's finest resort hotels have come up with special packages for newlyweds. Tours are of four and seven nights duration. Each includes lodging for the honeymoon couple, arrival and departure airport transportation, hotel tax, welcoming cocktail and a bottle of domestic wine (at the Acapulco Hyatt Regency, champagne.)

In Mexico City and Guadalajara, Western's honeymoon tour packages include a half-day city tour and in Acapulco, a harbor cruise with cocktails included.

Year-round honeymoon package prices at Mexico City's Camino Real are $329 for four nights; $515 for seven nights.

In Guadalajara, a sunny city noted for fountains and flowers, Western's honeymoon program offers a choice of two fine hotels. One of them, El Tapatio adds a daily continental breakfast. Winter season (Dec. 16-May 6) rates are $230 per couple for four nights; $349 per couple for seven nights. Summer (May 7-Dec. 15) rates are $239 for four nights; $359 for seven nights.

At Guadalajara's Camino Real, newlyweds will receive their daily breakfasts plus a free cover charge at the Blackout Disco, Monday through Thursday. Winter season rates are $265 for four nights; $399 for seven nights.

Along Acapulco's lovely bay, Western honeymooners again may choose between two excellent hotels.

At Las Brisas, they will stay in a casita with either a private or shared pool, have daily continental breakfasts, daily fresh flowers and fruit in their room and membership in La Concha, the private beach club for the duration of their stay. Las Brisas winter rates are in effect through May 5. With a shared pool, the four-night package is $405; seven nights, $670. Those wishing a private pool may enjoy that luxury for $569 per couple for four nights; $930 for seven nights.

Las Brisas' summer honeymoon tour rates for four nights are $330 per couple, sharing a pool; with a private pool, $405. The seven-night program is $520 per couple, sharing a pool or $645 per couple with a private pool.

The Acapulco Hyatt Regency adds daily breakfasts to other tour amenities and, in winter, dinner as well. Their honeymoon package winter rates are $539 for four nights; $875 for seven nights. Summer rates are, for four nights, $295 and for seven nights, $439 per couple.

The honeymoon tour packager is Mexico Tourism Consultants, Beverley Hills, Calif.

For further information about Western Airlines' honeymoon tours and special Mexico air fares, see your travel agent or call Western Airlines.

KARDAMYLE, Greece, home of Greek shipping magnates and the sailors who man their ships, is a typical Aegean island town. The town holds a reunion fete each summer to honor and welcome its native sons.

Boonville Has Its Own Language

By JEAN HARTLEY

BOONVILLE, CALIF. — The little town of Boonville on California State Highway No. 128, 100 miles north of San Francisco, may look like just another wide spot in the road to go skimming past on your way to the coast.

But there's an interesting story here. You'll get a hint of it if you stroll over to the Town House Restaurant and read the sign "Our gorms are all, our zeece hot; some regions dehig you, but we will not."

Yes, this is America, but Boonville has its own language, called Boontling (Boonville lingo). The natives enjoy baffling the tourists with it, but they'll be glad to give you a translation: "Our food is good, our coffee hot, some places will cheat you,but we will not."

Or if you should ask directions of one of the old-timers in town he is liable to give them to you in Boontling and watch your surprise. He can speak English, too, but it's a game they play in Boonville, and one of the reasons the language developed.

It had its beginnings in the Anytime Saloon, about 1895, and evolved mainly from a desire for insiders to exclude outsiders. The latter might have been womenfolk, rivals, children or any non-Boonvilleite.

Some of the oldtimers who are left to tell the story say that parents used it so their children wouldn't understand them. Some say that when they were teenagers they formed new words from their parents' vocabulary and spoke it to their friends, so their parents couldn't understand.

"Harpin' (speaking) Boont" was an interesting linguistic game. "Harpin' Nonch," or using the many taboo words that evolved, became a hilarious game. During wartime servicemen gave the censors a bad time with their letters home in Boontling.

The words in the Boontling vocabulary came about in different ways but were perfectly reasonable to those in the know. Many are identified with the early citizens.

For instance, "Zeece" is coffee because Zachariah C. Blevins used to make it strong. A "jeffer" is a fire because Jeff Vestal liked to make big fires in his stove. "Charlie Ball" means embarrass, because a local Indian with that name was shy. Some words came about because they made sense, as "lockin' " (wedding), or "hob" (dance).

The people used to get together for picnics, dances, weddings or hop pickings and speak Boontling exclusively and coin new words. These get-togethers were called "tidreys" from tea drink.

The ingredients were present for the birth of a language. There was isolation, the people were friendly, garrulous, inventive, witty and enjoyed getting the best of each other.

The roads were so full of slides and mud that they were practically impassable in winter. It wasn't until 1940 that they were improved to any extent. The peole enjoyed visiting and telling tales on each other. "I used to drive into Boonville from our home seven miles away with my father," recalls Mrs. Goldie Ward, "and it took all day because he stopped and talked to everyone he met."

Boonville, with a poulation of about 1,000, lies at the southern end of Anderson Valley in Mendocino County. The town has a hotel, restaurant, bank, grocery store, drive-in and a gas station or two.

Picturesque Anderson Valley is a narrow slot 25 miles long in the Coastal Mountain Range. It follows the Navarro River for a way on its journey to the Pacific. Apple orchards and meadows with grazing sheep, old farmhouses and barns and rail fences present a peaceful bucolic scene. The vegetation changes from grassy hills, studded with some oaks, laurels and madrones to thick redwood-forests, ferns and lush growth as the mountains get steeper toward the coast. This wooded section is busy with deer, elk, bears, squirrels and rabbits. Salmon and steelhead trout run in the Navarro River and Anderson Creek.

The Pomo Indians peopled this area before they left for reservations in the last century. In 1851 Walter Anderson, who gave the valley its name, came with the first white settlers. W. W. Boone, the town's namesake and a relative of Daniel, came in 1856.

By 1900 there were 100 families in the area. They farmed in the fertile little valley and raised livestock and hunted in the hills.

World War II brought changes to Boonville. Young men left for the service and didn't return to make thir living in the valley. Boontling was not heard much on the streets, as the old-timers died.

Today there is a renewed interest in the unique language, and an effort is being made to preserve it. For the first time there is a written vocabulary, and it is being taught in the local school, as a matter of history.

> "Our gorms are all, our zeece hot; some regions dehig you, but we will not."

Cuba Offers Holidays Without the Frills

By HARLON BARTLETT

HAVANA — Why, with most of the world to choose from, would anyone pick Cuba as a place to visit?

It might be advisable to first attack that question from the rear, from a negative standpoint.

You should not come here, for example, to partake of gambling, bright lights and lavish shows.

In other words, it's the ideal spot if you're trying to keep your blood pressure down.

The brand of pleasures available 20 years ago, when Havana was the Las Vegas of the Western Hemisphere and before Fidel Castro took the whole country in his hands, are gone.

This city of two million residents is Spartan, subdued, amazingly devoid of traffic. And crime. Not to mention toilet seats and hot water.

Despite some obvious shortcomings from typical tourist fare — you can't even go tripping from shop to shop making purchases because of rationing — Cuban officials speak hopefully of soon attracting 300,000 curious foreigners annually. The current figure is closer to 40,000.

When President Carter lifted the travel ban to Cuba in the spring of 1977, Yanquis, and their dollars, began trickling in. Always in groups. Only charter flights are allowed from the United States.

Commercial flights service Havana from Canada and Mexico. There is one 90-minute flight a week from Merida, in the Mexican state of Yucatan, on Wednesday night.

And one flight a week back to Merida, on Sunday night.

Main attraction for those few Americans who trek here is a firsthand inspection of Castro's kind of Communism.

The highlight of nightlife, just about the only light for that matter, is the Tropicana nightclub, where 1,000 patrons are seated under stars and palms.

To one whose Spanish vocabulary consists of about a dozen words, the show, with one exception, is merely singing, dancing, splashy costumes and yummy-looking ladies.

But when six washtubs, each with a washboard in it, are rolled out on stage, you somehow get the feeling the performers aren't singing of love.

Indeed, it turns out the entire show is devoted to tributes to Cuban life today and how swell things have been since the revolution in 1959.

As you move about the country, you become increasingly convinced the Tropicana message is genuinely believed by most of the 9.5 million Cubans.

The people seem happy, industrious and friendly. Especially friendly.

It's amazing how well you can communicate with a few words of English, a smattering of Spanish, some smiles and a bunch of sign language.

Maybe this cheerfulness will diminish in time, after hordes of tourists, the demanding and surly among them, ramble over the landscape.

Or maybe Cubans are naturally so pleasant they always will be able to handle the insufferable ones.

Tourists are herded around in air-conditioned buses, made in Spain, and generaly move from one designated tourist spot to another.

This does not mean, however, there are severe restrictions imposed. Some groups visit hospitals, manufacturing sites, apartments under construction, beaches, the Bay of Pigs.

Since taxis are rare, you either ride a tour bus or hoof it. Walk anywhere you desire, take all the pictures you want. Talk to anybody.

"We had several Cubans approach us and want to talk," said an insurance man from Los Angeles. "They're pushing English in all the schools and the people wanted to try it out on us."

One thing you won't do is buy much, since tourist buying is limited to souvenir shops. The big items, of course, are rum and cigars. The finest cigars are $40 a box.

Otherwise, the selection is the usual run of souvenir junk found everywhere. Only the fact that it's marked "Cuba" instead of "Mexico" or "San Francisco" makes it different.

Our group spent one night at the Riviera Hotel here. The rooms were hardly plush, though adequate. There was no radio, no TV.

The hot water in the bathtub gushed full force all night; the handle couldn't be turned.

New links with Western Canada.
Every winter, we share our sunshine with thousands of Canadians from the East. Now there are new links between The Bahamas and Western Canada; new airline services (at new low prices) which make it as easy to get to our warm, turquoise ocean as it is to get to the Pacific. You don't need a passport or a visa to visit this nation of 700 islands. There are no language problems . . . just a warm welcome from 235,000 friendly Bahamian people. And instead of a lei, we'll greet you at the airport with a cold Bahamian Delight. Like The Bahamas itself, it's deliciously refreshing and mildly intoxicating!
(It's better in The Bahamas)

New low package prices.
These are just three of the many vacation packages now available from Western Canada to The Bahamas. Prices include round-trip air fare, transfers and accommodation based on double occupancy. Any travel agent can give you details.
7 days in exciting Freeport.
Fiesta Holidays package includes accommodation at a modern apartment hotel (suites equipped with kitchenettes) close to nightclubs, fine restaurants, the casino and the famous International Shopping Bazaar. Daily maid service and welcome cocktail party also included.
From $459 per person, departing Vancouver and Victoria.
14 days in colonial Nassau.
Lobstick Tours can jet you to one of the great resort hotels on Nassau's fabulous Cable Beach. Package includes welcome breakfast, city tour and cocktail party.
From $779 per person, departing Calgary and Edmonton.
21 days in Nassau.
Fiesta Holidays 3 week package takes you to the South Ocean Beach Hotel, which has its own PGA-rated golf course. Price includes scuba clinic, tennis, sailing and rum punch party.
From $949 per person, departing Vancouver and Victoria.

Fabulous nightlife.
In The Bahamas, the end of a perfect day can be the start of a beautiful night! There are nightclubs, cabarets and dozens of fine restaurants, some offering gourmet food from around the world and others specializing in Bahamian delights like conch (pronounced conk) and grouper from the shallow ocean around our sandy shores. For a taste of real excitement, visit the great casinos in Nassau, Paradise Island and Freeport. If you don't care to play, it costs nothing to watch . . . and it's almost as much fun!
(It's better in The Bahamas)

Bargain-price shopping.
Shop Nassau's busy Bay Street or Freeport's famous International Bazaar for cameras and cardigans, crystal and china, perfumes, jewellery and much, much more . . . at much, much less than Canadian or even U.S. prices. Remember that if you're away for seven days or more, you can take $150 worth of bargains back into Canada without paying a nickel in duty.
(It's better in The Bahamas)

An all-winter summer.
You can expect temperatures in the low 70's (21 23°C) and an ocean that may even be a degree or two warmer. We average eight hours of sunshine every day from early January through till the end of April. And at this time of year, there's hardly enough rain to dampen your swimsuit.

Latvians Blame Moscow for Delay

Hotel Latvia Great but not Finished

By JOHN MORRISON

RIGA, Latvia (Reuter) — Some of the 8,000 Canadians who will travel to Moscow for the Olymic Games this summer, will get an opportunity to visit other countries behind the Iron Curtain. Latvia could be one of them, and there Riga would be the city to visit.

Here the view from the 27th floor cafe of the Hotel Latvia is splendid, the Soviet tourist brochures say, and visitors to Riga will just have to take their word for it.

The luxury 700-bed skyscraper on Lenin Street has only one thing wrong with it—it is still unfinished after 10 years of work.

Latvians are quick to point out with a smile that the mistakes which held up construction were made in Moscow by the state travel agency, Intourist.

"Intourist decided to build its own hotels for foreign tourists, but they overreached themselves financially and found they had to spread the construction over 10 years," a Latvian official explains.

Since its foundation by German colonists about 1200, Riga has been fought over by Poles, Swedes, Germans and Russians, all anxious to control the wealthy trading port.

Rarely have the native Latvians been left to handle things on their own—an inevitable fate for a small nation with a present population of 2.5 million.

The local German aristocracy, descendants of medieval Teutonic knights, set the tone in Riga for two centuries after Russian emperor Peter the Great won the city from the Swedes in 1721.

GREW RICH

The Hanseatic port turned into one of Czarist Russia's major industrial centres, with a population of half a million. During the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution and the civil war which followed, Latvians were prominent on the Communist side.

But attempts to set up a Soviet Republic in Latvia failed and between the wars Riga was the capital for two decades of an independent republic, first under parliamentary rule and then from 1934 a right-wing dictatorship.

This ended in 1940 when Latvia, with neighboring Estonia and Lithuania and eastern Poland returned to Soviet hands after the 1939 non-aggression pact between the Soviet Union and Nazi Germany.

Riga's darkest period of all came a few months later, when the Nazi invasion of the Soviet Union brought three years of slaughter and destruction when hundreds of thousands died in the concentration camps which dotted Latvia's forests.

HORRORS

Salaspils Camp, just south of Riga, where 100,000 prisoners, many of them children, were killed by the Germans and their local Latvian helpers, has been turned into one of Europe's most impressive war memorials, a huge clearing in a pine forest dominated by giant stone sculptures.

MORE ADVANCE

Visitors to Riga today will not find any Teutonic knights, though the centre of the old city still has a Western feeling which makes clear its links with the other Baltic trading cities further west.

The cemetery where the German aristocrats buried their dead in ornate marble and stone tombs now is decayed and crumbling. It will shortly be turned into a park.

The old town cathedral, which dates back to the year 1211, was taken away from the dominant Lutheran Church in the 1950s by the state.

Today it is a concert hall, and the narrow aisle is packed most evenings for recitals on the massive organ, built in 1884 and famous all over Europe.

But while the Germans have now gone, along with the Jewish community they wiped out, Russian influence in Riga may be stronger than ever.

Russian is a universal second language in Latvja and Russians make up nearly 30 per cent of the population to the Latvians 55 per cent, with the remainder made up by Ukranians and other Soviet nationalities.

Imaginative New Pavillion

An imaginative new pavilion and visitor centre has opened at one of England's finest tree gardens — the Westonbirt Arboretum in Gloucstershire. The timber pavilion and centre are aimed at ensuring that visitors can make the most of their trip to the arboretum, which contains perhaps the best collection of temperate trees in the world. It is 97 miles west of London, on the edge of the Cotswold Hills.

Teletourist

A teletourist service giving information 24 hours a day, has been launched in England by the city of York. Dial 8041 and a three-minute telephone message gives visitors full details of events and places of interest in this historic city located 193 miles north of London.

Snufflers Beware: Abbott

OTTAWA (UPC) — Revenue Minister Tony Abbott threatened to throw Conservative MP Elmer Mackay out on his ear Friday if he came "snuffling" around Revenue Canada looking for unguarded confidential documents.

Mackay, who claims he found more than 50 large boxes filled with 1974 and 1975 income tax returns left in the basement of a wartime temporary building, told reporters later Abbott's remark was "just plain bull."

"Why he allows sensitive material to lie around just boggles my mind," Mackay said. "What we need is an independent commissioner to look into this matter."

Abbott told the House of Commons "I can assure him (Mackay) that as far as the department of national revenue is concerned, our files are kept in the strictest confidentiality.

"I can also assure him that if he comes snuffling around our place with his cameras and listening devices, we will throw him out on his ear."

In the House, Mackay said the government was responsible under the Statistics Act to maintain confidentiality of tax forms.

Mackay, acting on a telephone tip, said he visited the building and found 50 to 60 cardboard boxes of income tax forms used in a national Statistics Canada survey on income levels of farmers.

Abbott said Revenue Canada was required by the Statistics Act also to give StatsCan access to the returns for purposes of recording statistical data.

He told reporters that "when they are given to Statistics Canada, they are subject to the confidentiality provisions in that area. We are not obliged by law to follow returns to see that confidentiality is maintained."

Mackay said Abbott's reply was just another attempt to "pass the buck" and not accept responsibility for the government's actions. "As much as he wants to squirm out of this, he can't.

Abbott said the boxes of income tax forms were the result of "very exceptional circumstances," and that Statistics Canada was in the process of moving to other premises.

"But if Statistics Canada received information, it's up to them to maintain their confidentiality," he said. "At this point, all we can do is make sure that a situation like this doesn't happen."

Dumping Denied

TORONTO (CP) — An executive of a car dealership selling Lada cars from the Soviet Union has denied reports that the cars are selling in that country for as much as $6,000 above the Canadian price.

"It just isn't true," John Wright, marketing manager for the dealership in Ajax, Ont., east of Toronto, said in an interview today.

Charles Caccia, Liberal MP for Davenport, said in the Commons the Lada which sells for about $4,000 in Canada, cost approximately $10,000 in the U.S.S.R.

Wright said the cost of the car in the U.S.S.R. depends on a person's political standing.

"If you are a party member in good standing and you have a government job, the car might cost $1,500 to $2,000."

But for non-party members, the cost might be as high as $6,000.

B.C. Pen Escapers Arrested

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Two British Columbia Penitentiary escapers were in police custody Friday night while authorities were trying to piece together how they got out of the maximum-security prison in this Vancouver suburb.

Richard Schiere, 31, serving life for non-capital murder, and Richard Levesque, also 31 and doing 13 years for drug offences, were arrested without resistance at a home in nearby Burnaby Friday. A foot-long, homemade knife was confiscated at the scene.

No charges had been laid against the pair.

Prison officials originally thought the two were still inside the institution.

Bomb Raiders Hunted

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 25 detectives, crime specialists and fire department personnel have been assigned full-time to bring a halt to fire bombings which have hit 11 buildings in Vancouver and nearby Burnaby during the past six weeks.

Sergeant Jack Crich, major crimes section co-ordinator, said Thursday police have no positive clues in the bombings.

Financial institutions, government offices and Vancouver city hall have been hit by Molotov cocktails, while the headquarters of the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit was strafed with rifle fire.

There have been no injuries.

Highest damage reported was $100,000 to a branch of the Royal Bank here.

Most of the incidents have taken place during late night and early morning hours.

Police say that an unknown anarchist group may be responsible for the raids, but they have ruled out a guerrilla group because no demands have been made.

Crich said the raids may be connected with wall slogans in Vancouver proclaiming "destroy the state."

Japanese Control Fish Firms - Stevens

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Foreign companies, especially Japanese conglomerates, control most of the fishing companies on the West Coast, apparently using formerly-independent local companies to determine prices, United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union leader Homer Stevens said Friday.

Testifying before the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission investigating the fishing industry, Stevens said the large companies fight any attempt at union organization, fix prices and "charge whatever the market will bear."

"It's looking to me to be less and less competition; despite appearances it's very controlled. The companies are doing this, they're getting together and fixing the prices and charging to buyers whatever the market will bear," he said.

Stevens, who asked his testimony be given in open session, agreed with union president Jack Nichol, who charged Thursday that the industry is controlled by a few large companies.

Too Much at Stake to Quit: PM

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said Friday that there is too much at stake for him to quit as Liberal leader and so he will seek re-election.

The prime minister said he faces a fight for equal opportunities for Canadians in poorer parts of the country, for French-Canadian language rights and a fight against some provinces to see that Canada's resources are distributed to all parts of the country.

During the taping of a radio interview on the last day of a three-day visit to the city, he refused to say whether he would quit politics if he is defeated.

"Why should I ask myself what I will do if I lose because I do not plan to lose."

But, he added, that if he did lose to Progressive Conservative leader Joe Clark he would be happy to return to teaching, to spend time with his three children and to retire to a home in the country.

The interview, to be broadcast Sunday evening on radio station CFRB-AM, was the last item on Trudeau's agenda during his visit.

The prime minister said the Progressive Conservative party's plan to make mortgage payments tax deductible is too expensive to be borrowed by the Liberal government.

He also said there is no crying need to make mortgage interest payments and taxes deductible from income tax, as proposed by Clark.

Earlier this week, Andre Ouellet, federal urban affairs minister, said the government is considering giving tenants and homeowners shelter tax credits to counter Clark's proposals.

On the constitution, Trudeau said he will make one final attempt to reach an agreement with all 10 provinces.

If that doesn't work, he may ask the voters for a mandate to bring it home without unanimous consent from the provinces.

PCs Plan Strategy To Spoil Liberal Vote-Bait

SASKATOON (CP) — The federal Progressive Conservative party executive will decide this weekend how to fight Prime Minister Trudeau on at least three platforms in the coming federal election, PC national president Bob Coates said Friday.

The Nova Scotia MP said the 40-member executive will discuss strategy if Trudeau should stress national unity, federal-provincial resource control or the constitution.

Coates, in Saskatoon, said they would also study implications of a "federal power-play to alter the concept of Canada."

Whatever platform Trudeau chooses, he will attempt to direct public attention away from the economy, Coates said.

The Liberals are behind by eight percentage points in some Ontario polls and have lost key "name" candidates, he said.

He named University of Toronto President John Evans and former Canadian United Nations delegate Maurice Strong.

"It's almost a wipeout for him," Coates said of Trudeau's chances in the key Toronto voting area.

"Trudeau is down on a bended knee waiting for mercy but the people are waiting for him to set a date so they can get rid of him."

Quebec Liberal: Wagner

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Claude Wagner, former top Progressive Conservative spokesman for Quebec, says the Conservatives will capture no more than one or two Quebec seats in the federal election expected this spring.

"They are not going to make great gains in Quebec," Wagner said in an interview with Ottawa radio station CFGO taped for broadcast Sunday.

Conservatives now hold only two of the 75 federal ridings in the province. They had three until Wagner accepted an offer by Prime Minister Trudeau and joined the Senate last spring.

Wagner's comments come three years after he narrowly lost the Conservative party leadership to Joe Clark.

Wagner said he feels Clark "means well" in his efforts to increase Conservative strength in Quebec.

"But in this age of ours it is not sufficient to mean well."

Quebecers had to be shown that they could help shape and influence the Conservative party, he said.

Police Warn Chain Letter Invites Jail

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec provincial police and justice department officials said Friday they are investigating a chain letter circulating here that promises participants a $400,000 return on an investment of only $200 in 12 days.

Investigators said persons convicted of participating in the chain letter — which was launched by a group calling itself the "Gold Circle" — face a two-year prison term.

"Fill 'er up and charge it to my pal over there".

New Report Reveals

CIVIL SERVANTS' PENSIONS COULD COST TAXPAYERS $2 BILLION A YEAR

Now, a new government report reveals that a civil servant who makes $15,000 a year could COST THE TAXPAYER AN EXTRA $5,160.

In other words, the taxpayer pays an additional 34.4% of total Civil Service Payroll to fund the current indexed pension plan and pay off the back debt. The total past service debt by 1976 was $5,800,000,000 — over half the total government expenditure the year Trudeau became Prime Minister.

You probably never heard of the Tomenson-Alexander Report.

Only a few copies were printed and circulated on a limited basis.

And somehow the newspapers didn't manage to pick it up. It was a report Ottawa paid for. It was highly technical, but a shocker!

Before the report was ordered, the Hon. Robert Andras, President of the Treasury Board, said in the House of Commons, "we will make sure that there is no taxpayer subsidy to cover excessive payroll costs of the pension plan".

What the report proves, is that civil servants' pensions are costing the public $2 billion a year; a dollar a day for every family in Canada.

We think the payroll costs are very excessive.

However, after preparing the changes to the new plan that is now being recommended to Parliament, the Hon. Robert Andras says "the new plan will make very little difference".

We think he is talking out of both sides of his mouth.

Three reasons you should be mad as hell about this.

One. You've been misled. You've been told that the civil service pension plan wasn't really costing the taxpayer anything. But now the government's own report shows that it can cost $2 billion a year.
Two. You should be mad as hell because Members of Parliament don't seem to care. The reason is the Members of Parliament also have a fully indexed pension. Our figures show, that if Mr. Trudeau retires at age 65 and his pension is indexed at 7% (extremely modest), the value of his pension is $1,222,000. This is the amount you would have to pay if you purchased the same kind of pension for yourself. The value of Mr. Clark's pension on the same basis if he retired at age 50 is $914,900. Mr. Trudeau pays only 8% of this amount and Mr. Clark 12%.

Three. You should be mad as hell because these people have protected themselves from inflation. Your pension can be eaten away by inflation. Theirs will rise with the cost of living after they retire. And yet many economists say that it is the federal government that is primarily responsible for inflation.

It's like the Captain of the Titanic being first into the lifeboat.

Mail this coupon. Save $365 a year.

We were told that part of the reason Ottawa was pushed into having the Tomenson-Alexander Report done was because members of the National Citizens' Coalition put pressure on Members of Parliament.

After the remarks of Robert Andras, you can see we have to keep up the pressure.

We believe we can do more. We believe that we can put more pressure on the government to see that civil servants — and Members of Parliament — actually pay for their own indexing — instead of having the taxpayer carry the load. Just maybe this would encourage them to work harder towards reducing inflation.

The way we'll put that pressure on is to have a lot of the coupons below sent to us. We need thousands — because politics is a numbers game.

Fill out a coupon yourself. And get a friend to fill one out too. If you send a contribution, it will help us do more ads of this kind. If you're one of the people who have not supported us while we fought your battle in the past, don't feel guilty. Do it now.

You could save your family $365 a year in taxes.

LATE BULLETIN!

After Treasury Board President Judd Buchanan saw this ad, he called it a "pile of rubbish" in a speech in the House.

You be the judge. Here is a thumbnail sketch of the indexed pension plan scandal by another M.P., who is an actuary, taken from Hansard of February 12, 1969:

"Fully indexed pensions for civil servants were introduced in 1973 . . . the bill took a grand toatal of ten days (to pass) . . . in those ten days we approved measures which established an initial unfunded liability (debt) of approximately $6 billion . . . the equivalent of ¼ of the total government spending in the year without seeing so much as an estimate or projection . . . (this) was either dishonest or seriously negligent . . ."

After the Coalition pressured the government through ads to revoke the indexing, this is how the government answered:

"In October, 1976, Treasury Board released the 'Basic Facts Paper' . . . to establish both the reasonableness of the benefit levels and the soundness of funding procedures . . . the Canadian Institute of Actuaries . . . (said) 'the spuriousness or dubious validity of so many arguments (in the Paper) aroused the suspicion or outright condemnation of practically every professional actuary who has examined the document . . .'

The government then introduced Bill C-12 to amend the pension plan last October. Under this plan there are two funds. One fund pays for basic pensions, the other pays for indexing pensions to the cost of living.

The government says that under C-12, taxpayers won't pay more than 1% of the civil servants' salaries into the indexing fund.

But the MP-Actuary thinks money will be moved from the basic pension fund to the indexing fund. He said:

"I think this is just a sham; it's a flim-flam. You cannot just transfer money from one side to another and say 'Look, the other side is now fine'."

"What we have before us today is another bill to change the public service pensions . . . (which) might be construed as a deliberate concealing of the cost effects" of the proposed indexing plan.

Homosexual Priests

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's Anglican bishops have decided to allow homosexuals to become ordained priests, says Canadian Churchman, the church's national paper.

Ordination, however, has been made conditional on the homosexual promising to abstain from sexual acts with persons of the same sex, says a story in the March issue.

Most Rev. Edward W. Scott, primate of the Anglican Church, said the decision came from recognition that homosexuality is a social reality and a need for the church to "be more open about issues."

He said the admission of homosexuality will be a private matter between the candidate and his or her bishop. Public disclosure would hamper the effectiveness and acceptance of a priest in the ministry.

"I'm sure there will be many people in the church who will be disturbed by this . . . both those who feel we have gone too far and those who think it's not far enough," Scott said.

"I think it is a position that involves real integrity on the part of the church."

He added that the church cannot condone homosexual acts and said the bishops are in the middle of an intensive study of sexuality in the church.

Since the study started in 1976, the bishops have reiterated their public stance on legal rights for homosexuals but repeated their opposition to church blessing of homosexual unions.

Scott said he disagrees with an editorial in the church paper which says the bishops have set a double standard between church and society.

The editorial says some of the most troubled homosexual priests in Canada are those who engage in sex.

Alberta Cash Gushes Again

Times News Services

EDMONTON — The Alberta government's money well gushed again Friday as Premier Peter Lougheed, spending his way through a provincial election campaign, announced three programs to help senior citizens at a cost of $130.7 million.

Lougheed designated $110 million for an Alberta Pioneers' Repair Program, for repairs and improvements to the homes of senior citizens; $20 million a year for rent subsidies for the elderly and $700,000 for senior citizen drop-in centers.

It was the third time in as many weeks that Lougheed opened the pipeline out of the province's resource revenues. He introduced a $2-billion plan to wipe out non-utility debts for municipalities two weeks ago, and followed with a $500 million mortgage assistance program for low and middle-income earners.

And he promised to spend even more money before the March 14 vote.

Lougheed, meanwhile, stood firm in his refusal to debate with the leaders of other Alberta political parties.

The Progressive Conservatives have been debating in the legislature for the last four years and the place for debate is in the legislature, he said.

The PCs have a campaign plan of taking their case directly to the people to seek a renewed mandate, the premier said. His candidates are conducting a door-to-door campaign.

Haiti Drops Insistence On Passports

PORT-AU-PRINCE (AP) — The Haitian government, bowing to pressure from tourist agents and hotel owners, will postpone a decree that all Canadians and U.S. citizens visiting Haiti must have passports.

A government spokesman said the reason for the new law was that many persons who were not U.S. citizens or Canadians were coming into the country illegally.

Sauve Faults Canadian TV Fare

OTTAWA (CP) — Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve has called for more and better-quality Canadian programs as the way to wean television viewers back to Canadian stations.

Speaking to a group of CBC producers here Friday, the minister said Canadian content rules by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) are not working.

The rules, which call for 60 per cent of total programming to be Canadian and 50 per cent on prime viewing hours in the evening, were to ensure an adequate amount of Canadian programming which, in turn, would foster creative domestic talent.

"But what has happened is that broadcasters have filled their (Canadian) quotas with cheap, easy-to-produce programs that are not always bad," the minister said.

(Her prepared text referred to the programs as "pap.")

Cable television, bringing millions of Canadians a wide choice between Canadian and American stations, brought about a situation where "we're just drowning in U.S. programming," said Mme. Sauve.

She conceded that there is not much incentive to invest in Canadian talent to produce programming to attract large viewing audiences.

"As a result, much of our talent has gone south, which is also where our broadcasters go to buy programs that use that talent," the minister declared.

One way to alter the situation could be a change content rules so that more and better Canadian shows would be screened between the prime viewing hours of 8 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Mme. Sauve suggested tax incentives could be used to promote more Canadian programming.

She also noted that private broadcasters are doing well financially in Canada, saying their return on investment is 21 per cent.

The CBC had difficulty accomplishing its programming objectives because of insufficient resources, she said.

Salmon Debates in April

OTTAWA (CP) — Talks on a treaty to limit the interception of West Coast salmon by Canadian and U.S. fishermen will resume in early April, a fisheries department official said Friday.

David Bollivar told the Commons fisheries committee that government officials will resume efforts to settle the issue, which was not covered by a tentative fisheries agreement worked out by Canadian and U.S. negotiators last week.

Salmon bound for Canadian and American rivers pass through the other country's fishing zone and both sides would like to see their salmon saved for their own fishermen. Talks have gone on for at least 10 years for a treaty to limit salmon interceptions.

He also said the International North Pacific Halibut Commission could continue for another two years instead of expiring in April. It might evolve into a scientific body in a few years after 50 years as the regulator of halibut fishing on the high seas off Alaska.

The fisheries agreement provides for a two-year withdrawal of Canadian and U.S. fishermen from fisheries in the other's zone.

British Columbia halibut fishermen will get two million pounds of Alaskan halibut this year and one million pounds in 1980. In return Washington state fishermen will get 3,250 tonnes of groundfish from the B.C. zone.

Those fisheries will be terminated after 1980.

Bollivar said the U.S. allocations will not require a reduction in the amount of groundfish B.C. fishermen will be allowed.

Benno Friesen (PC—Surrey-White Rock) said most B.C. fisheries groups are opposed to the fisheries agreement because they want a one-year withdrawal and more halibut.

The Americans were demanding 30,000 tonnes of groundfish in exchange for a one-year agreement, Bollivar said. That level would be too high for the B.C. stocks.

Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said the two years are needed to cushion the fishermen while B.C. fish stocks are re-allocated. "We don't want fishermen to retire from the fishery and we don't want to plunge them into a fishery they're not familiar with."

LeBlanc also said the government is trying to find alternate employment for staff laid off at the fisheries laboratories in Halifax and Vancouver because of federal spending cuts.

The layoffs came in sectors working on technology for the processing industry, LeBlanc said. "We are rearranging our priorities.We're improving our stock assessment and our technological research to benefit fishermen."

The department can't protect the jobs of all its employees but it had decided to keep parts of the laboratories open, he said.

Tom Siddon (PC—Burnaby-Richmond-Delta, B.C.) said the layoffs do not make sense because many small firms can't afford to do research. The fate of the labs was in doubt "because the middle level of scientists has been carved out of them."

Men's fall fashions include Dimitri's narrow line, left, flannel-lined suede shirt, and long-haired fur coat by Banks, right

Men's Fashions for Fall Designed to be Worn

By BERNADINE MORRIS

NEW YORK — Bill Blass developed a raft of new necklines. Calvin Klein designed some new satin shirts. What makes these design forays notable is the fact that the clothes were for men.

Men's fashions are inching up to the territory long occupied by women's styles. The Blass and Klein showings of men's clothes for next fall vied with the presentations of women's fashion for summer in the past week.

Their shows were just as crowded and their offerings were awaited with the same breathless excitment as those of Oscar de la Renta, Halston and Pauline Trigere who, for the moment, contented themselves with women's fashion's.

"Men are ready for fashion," said a spokesman for Beged-or, the Israeli leather specialists, who are better known for their women's styles. This time, they concentrated their fashion presentation on men's designs, from bomber jackets to trench coats, in smooth leather or suede.

The Blass necklines were for evening and were the most dramatic part of the overhauling of evening fashions, to which the designer is dedicated.

"We're not calling them formal clothes," he explained. "They're evening clothes, and they offer some alternatives for a man to choose at night when the woman he's with is dressing up."

His alternative range from a jacket in Black Watch plaid, which he shows with a button-down-collar silk shirt (he has always wanted a button-down shirt in silk for himself), to a black silk shirt with a white wing collar.

Most of the dinner jackets are fairly conventional, with peaked lapels or shawl collars, both on the narrow side, the variations are found in the shirts or, in one instance, the cummerbund, which is made with points at the bottom, like a vest. When the evening is not too formal, he suggests a shirt worn open, with a black ascot inside instead of a black tie.

White collars have become familiar on colored shirts for day wear. Blass suggests a white collar on a black silk shirt for evening. The white collar on a beige shirt is for the less flamboyant.

"Women have had a lot of choice in what they can wear at night," the designer said. "Now it's time for men to have their turn."

The Calvin Klein satin shirts are his version of what men are to wear when women dress up. They're in somber colors, such as brown or navy, and can be worn with a dark business suit or a suede or velvet jacket.

Some of Calvin Klien's other concepts: unlined, unconstructed jackets with padded shoulders, sweaters worn over a T-shirt, with a bit of the undershirt showing at the neckline, brilliantly colored parkas (by brilliant colors he means red and green) worn with corduroy pants or jeans as well as with business suits, lots of leather and lots of cashmere.

It's sybaritic and casual and contemporary looking at the same time, and the designer likes it so much that he lept grabbing pieces for his own wardrobe as they were being made.

"I was afraid I wouldn't be able to get them after they went on sale," he said. "I'm going to throw out all my old clothes."

Everybody knows what an impact Calvin Klein has had on women's clothes. He may just revolutionize men's attitudes, too, especially when he speaks with such conviction.

Women's designers have also expressed themselves eloquently in their new collections.

Halston, for instance, had produced one of the prettiest white suits that is likely to turn up anywhere. A simple linen style with beige shoes and natural bracelets as accessories, it is the epitome of neat summer dressing.

It is a star in a collection that emphasizes easy-fitting, uncontrived shapes, without the constraint of shoulder pads. There are plenty of pants, however, with loose jackets, and a poplin jacket with elastic at the bottom does yeoman service with all kinds of summer gear.

The big news, however, is in the prints, which Halston describes as "kind of Japanese Kandinsky-Klee." The fabric is a synthetic made in Japan, and it can be put in the washing machine, the designer insists, though it is unlikely that too many women will do that. The prints are lively abstractions in bright colors such as blue, yellow and chartreuse. How much chartreuse have you seen lately? There are also constellations of dots and, as the day lengthens, beaded styles for truly festive evenings.

Hold It: Build Storage Cubes

hand around the house

By A.J. Hand

Every home needs more storage space. One of the simplest, cheapest, most sufficient ways to get that space is to build storage cubes.

A storage cube is nothing more than a simple box with an open front like one shown in the sketch. The 16-inch size shown is a good size for a number of jobs.

It will hold about 75 LP records, a dozen oversize books, or several weeks worth of newspapers.

It's just the right size for an table. Add a shelf in the middle and it will store dozens of paperbacks. Make a pair and you can use them as pedestals to support a coffee table top made of wood or plate glass.

Add a door to the front of a cube and you have a small cabinet. Change the size to suit your needs. A bunch of 12-inchers, for example, can be stacked to form a large wall unit.

HOW TO MAKE IT. The basic building material is ¾-inch particleboard. This stuff comes in four-by-eight foot sheets, just like plywood. But it costs about half as much as A/C plywood, is smooth on both sides, and its surface won't craze and ruin a glossy enamel finish as happens with plywood.

The only trick to building good cubes is careful cutting. Cuts must be smooth and straight, and dimensions must be accurate. If you have access to a table saw or radial arm saw, good.

If not, use a portable circular saw and guide it by means of a straight-edged board clamped to your work. A single sheet of particleboard (about $10) will make three cubes of the size shown.

For greatest strength, assemble the parts with screws and glue as shown. Use 1¾ inch number eight flathead screws and white glue.

To make the job go fast, buy a special bit that drills and countersinks for the screws all in one operation. These are made in various sizes, so make sure you get the right size for the screws you buy.

Particleboard does not hold screws quite as well as wood. To help overcome this problem, put a drop of glue on the screw threads before driving. The glue will also serve as a lubricant, making the screws easier to drive.

FINISHING. After the glue has dried, fill over all the screwheads with a water putty such as Durham's Rock Hard. Use the same stuff to fill any gaps in poorly fitting joints.

Let the putty set up hard, then sand smooth with 120-grit paper. Level out any high spots in the putty, and sand all sharp corners and edges to a slight radius.

The best finishing material for these cubes is a good oil-base enamel. Latex enamels are okay as long as you prime the particleboard with an oil-base finish first. Don't use latex enamel on bare particleboard, however. The water in the paint makes the surface fibres swell and the result is a rough surface.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago you had some advice in your column for a woman who was in love with a married man. It started out, "Never expect to see him on Sundays or holidays."

I cut it out and stuck it in a book, but now I don't remember which book it was, and it's driving me crazy. (My husband is a college professor and we have at least 10,000 books in our library!)

I need that letter to show to my daughter who is in love with a married man. Can you locate it and print it again, please? L.

DEAR L.: Here it is:

Dear Abby: May I give your readers the benefit of my very valuable experience? I address this to any woman who is "in love" with a married man:

Never expect to see him on Sundays or holidays.

Never call him at home.

Don't ever expect him to take you out in public, but be prepared to entertain HIM at your place. He may bring a bottle or the steaks occasionally, but in actual dollars and cents you will spend more on him that he'll spend on you.

Never depend on him in times of personal crisis.

Don't believe him when he tells you his wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin) and she hasn't slept with him for 10 years.

Don't ever expect his wife to divorce him — even if she catches him. She knows you are not his first, and won't be his last. Also, she is not about to give up her social status, financial security and retirement income because of you.

However, her discovery will probably terminate his affair with you, so be prepared to get some new clothes, circulate, and find another married man whose wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin) and hasn't slept with him for 10 years. Sign me . . .

His Wife

DEAR ABBY: My 8-year-old daughter has been sulking for a week because I refused to buy her a brassiere! Take my word for it, Abby, she has nothing to put in it, but she wants one anyway. She says all her friends at school wear them. I've seen her friends and I don't know why any of them would be wearing a brassiere.

Her sour puss around here lately is getting me down. Should I give in and buy her a brassiere just to improve her disposition?

— MOM

DEAR MOM: No. Encourage her to be patient. Mothers who give in to their children to improve their dispositions are letting themselves in for an endless improvement program.

Here's an effective design for place mats

KNIT AND CHAT

By MAY E. MacLEAN

A couple of weeks ago I referred to the period between the New Year and spring as the winter doldrums and many of you have written thanking me for my suggestions.

This is a good time of year to have a project such as knitting, crocheting an afghan, making a pieced or applique quilt or spring clothes.

Some of us are lucky and get a winter holiday. But for many, winter evenings can be long. Many of you have written about macrame and hairpin lace. Have you tried the library for craft books? I think you'll be pleasantly surprised at the books on crafts.

Macrame is the art of decorative knotting and I have two good patterns if you would like this craft. Macrame Three has instructions for several plant holders and a cut bird feeder. Macrame Hacienda has wall hangings, cushions, place mats, lampshades and rugs. Both books have diagrams of the knots used so that you will have no problems. All you need is time and patience.

As these books are large they need an 8½ by 11-inch stamped envelope and are $1 each. If you don't have the right size envelope, remit an extra 30 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address.

Hairpin lace and tatting are very old crafts. A loom and crochet hook are used for hairpin lace. The loom varies in width depending upon the laciness desired for the over—all effect. A book with illustrations will help you learn the basic stitch easily.

Tatting is worked with a shuttle. It is also a form of knotting over a loop which is formed and held in the left hand.

If you would like to learn the basic stitches of crochet my leaflet No. 6879 Learn to Crochet will be helpful. It gives complete diagrams of the hands, yarn and hook step by step.

The leaflet also has directions for left-handed people.

This week's pattern is a crochet trolley cloth or place mat. Worked in firm motifs which are assembled into the shape and size you require. This design is effective and attractive.

To order Leaflet No. 7951 or any other pattern mentioned, send 75 cents for patterns or $1 for macrame

Lazy Eye Worth Check

My son's teacher called to tell me that she thinks he has a "lazy eye" and that is why he doesn't learn as well as other children in the class. Can anything be done to correct this condition? He is six and seems like a perfectly normal, healthy boy.—Mrs. N.L.

Dear Mrs. L.:

Your son's teacher is one of those many dedicated educators who closely observe the talents and the potential of their children. Many teachers all over America are responsible for making astute observations about their pupils, observations that may often be missed by parents themselves.

A "lazy eye" may be only one of the many conditions that should be thoroughly investigated in order to completely understand your son's progress is poor at school.

There are, indeed, physical reasons for such impaired progress. There also may be psychological reasons, and even neurological conditions which adversely affect the child.

There is a technical condition known as "amblyopia," which is commonly overlooked and which, unfortunately, cannot readily be reversed if the condition persists for a long time. Children with normal eyes focus on an image with both eyes. The images are brought to the brain. There the images from the two eyes fuse and become one. This known as "binocular vision."

When, because of a "lazy" eye or other condition, these images do not fuse and become one, children develop double vision. This double vision is probably one of the most important and frequently overlooked reasons for poor learning, poor coordination and inablility to keep up with school work.

Children whose eyes are crossed due to a muscle imbalance are frequently referred to as having a "lazy eye" which may be responsible for amblyopia.

The fact that the teacher suspects a lazy eye does not, of course, mean that your son has it. Nevertheless, you should follow through with a complete eye examination. For the early discovery of amblyopia offers the greatest chance for correction.

Dear Miss H.:

Your friend may be a good friend, but she obviously doesn't know that the removal of hair by X-ray is dangerous and has actually been totally condemned by the medical profession and by specialists in radiology. In fact, there are specific laws in most states that prohibit the use of X-rays for this purpose.

There are many excellent methods for removing hair that are not dangerous. Electrolysis, waxing techniques and certain chemical depilatories are safe and usually effective.

GEMWISE

JEWELRY FASHIONS, FACTS, FICTION

BY

MEMBER AMERICAN

EVERYTHING YOU'VE ALWAYS WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT JEWELRY . . .

In my 33 years in the jewelry business I've been asked many questions about jewelry and gemstones, questions you may have had but never gotten around to inquiring about. Here are just a few:

What is the most common gemstone?

The most common gemstone is quartz, which is made up of the two most abundant elements on earth, silicon and oxygen. In the gem world, quartz takes many varied forms: rose quartz, smoky quartz, the lovely yellow citrine, the rich purple amethyst, colorless rock crystal, and silky brown tiger's eye, just to name a few.

What's the most valuable gem next to diamond?

Well, actually, diamond is not necessarily the most valuable gem. Diamond, ruby, emerald and alexandrite in their finest qualities are all at the top of the scale. But the range of qualities in which gemstones occur is so great that no one of these is always more valuable than another.

Do gemstones ever naturally exhibit a star or are star gems all man-made?

Yes, some natural gemstones do exhibit a star effect, known as asterism. Star rubies and saphires are probably the best known of the asteriated stones, but there is also star garnet and star quartz and other star stones. The star is caused by the reflection of light from tiny needle-like inclusions which intersect at specific angles within the stone. Over twenty years ago, man succeeded in synthesizing star stones in the laboratory. This is probably the "man-made" material you're thinking of, since the stones were highly publicized.

Anxiety Needn't be a Lifelong Companion

By JANE E. BRODY
New York Times

> There are many symptoms of anxiety, and many of them masquerade as genuine physical ailments. Unfortunately, many people and their physicians reach for Valium for relief rather than treat it as a signal to uncover what may be really bothering them.

Jean's husband was about to be promoted and relocated, which was good news to both of them. But Jean was not feeling well and was having trouble sleeping. She was easily upset and jittery and worried about her persistent abdominal cramps.

Although Robert's office is on the seventh floor, he always takes the stairs. He tells people it's good exercise, but in fact even if he had to walk 32 flights, he wouldn't take an elevator. The mere thought of being in an elevator sends him into a small panic. His heart races and his breathing quickens and he feels faint.

Jean and Robert are experiencing the symptoms of anxiety. Virtually everyone has them at one time or another. Anxiety is not a disease, but rather a feeling state. It is a signal that something is not quite right, a kind of vague, unfocused fear, a sense of uneasiness.

There are many symptoms of anxiety, and many of them masquerade as genuine physical ailments. Included are rapid or pounding heartbeat, difficulty breathing or breathlessness, tremulousness, sweating, dry mouth, tightness in the chest, sweaty palms, dizziness, weakness, nausea, diarrhea, cramps, insomnia, fatigue, tension headache, loss of appetite and sexual disturbances.

Most feelings of anxiety require no specific treatment. An explanation of the probable cause of the feelings may be all that is needed to dissolve them or make them more bearable. Unfortunately, many people and their physicians instead reach for Valium or some other tranquilizer for relief of mild anxiety. In fact, it's usually better not to mask mild anxiety but rather to treat it as a signal to uncover what may be really bothering you.

As Dr. Willard Gaylin, a New York psychotherapist, points out in his soon-to-be-published book, Feelings: Our Vital Signs, anxiety frequently serves useful purposes. It gets students to study hard. The anxiety generated by an impending deadline will often put an end to writer's block. Anxiety can alert us to an impending disaster or to the need for change and adaptation.

Anxiety is closely related to fear. But whereas the cause for fear is usually apparent, the circumstance that precipitates anxiety is hidden and unknown to the person. When the cause for anxiety becomes known but the feeling of apprehension remains, it is called worry.

We live at a time when so little is stable and the future is so unpredictable that anxiety in one form or another has become a part of everyday life. Many call this the Age of Anxiety. We all have ample opportunity to experience again and again what psychoanalysts call separation anxiety and castration anxiety.

Separation anxiety is normal for the growing child, who depends on his parents for security and love but who periodically must part from these comforts and eventually must leave them forever. Separation anxiety has its counterparts in adult life, in the form of the need for approval and acceptance. When we feel rejected, criticized, unloved or unworthy, we become anxious and insecure.

Castration anxiety is related to competitiveness, strength and power, our basic ability to "make it." When these are threatened, such as through loss of a job, looks, money or social position, anxiety results.

Sometimes the cause of anxiety has an organic basis, such as anxiety attacks precipitated by excessive drinking of caffeinated beverages or the abuse of other stimulant drugs.

Although they usually don't realize it, most people have found ways to alleviate anxious feelings. Among those that Gaylin delineates are spending money (proving yourself both potent — i.e., solvent — and lovable — i.e., worthy of a gift); stuffing something into your mouth, such as food, drugs or cigarettes (forms of self-reward and reassurance); seeking sexual gratification, either with a partner or by oneself (again, proving your worth and lovability), and performing trivial but useful tasks such as polishing the car, shining shoes, straightening bookshelves and scrubbing floors to induce relaxation and produce a sense of accomplishment. Practically everyone has built up one or more defenses against anxiety, and there is nothing wrong with that so long as they don't have destructive effects on your life.

Sometimes, however, the degree of anxiety or the method chosen, however subconsciously, to relieve it takes on unhealthy characteristics. People may attempt to drown their anxiety feelings in alcohol or obliterate them with drugs or excessive sleep. Others drown themselves in work.

Rather than live with a vague, undefined dread, some people assign a cause to it, whether true or not, and then have a seemingly rational fear, such as a fear of flying in airplanes, which, after all, do sometimes crash and kill people. Carried to an extreme, such fears become life-limiting phobias. As Gaylin explains, a person who is afraid of elevators is rarely actually worried about the elevator breaking down. Rather, he has displaced a less avoidable terror, such as a fear of interacting with people, with a more controllable activity.

Other times, a person may resolve his anxious discomfort by creating a delusion that would justify it. Rather than live with an irrational fear, he may decide that his colleagues are trying to sabotage his work and that's why he feels so anxious.

Like Jean, some anxious people may fail to recognize their feelings for what they really are because they are subconsciously converted into physical symptoms. These people may be ashamed of their anxiety, but physiological distress is easier for them to accept and express.

The result may be gastrointestinal disorders, such as chronic diarrhea, with no discernible organic cause, or anxiety, heart attacks, that mimic all the signs of a real heart attack but don't involve any heart damage at all. Such persons may go from doctor to doctor with their complaints and have many tests over and over vainly seeking a physical explanation for their ill health.

Sometimes, it is not how the anxiety is expressed but rather the degree of anxiety that makes it pathological. Some people are chronic worriers, fretting constantly over trivial problems and things that are unlikely to become problems. Since they are anxious much of the time, they get little pleasure from life and give little joy to others, who must constantly reassure them.

An anxiety reaction can sometimes border on or actually become panic. The person may become frantic or immobilized by his overwhelming diffuse fears. Anxiety heart attack is one form of an acute panic reaction.

Treatment of anxiety depends on its degree, cause and the nature of its expression. Simply telling an anxious person with physical symptoms that there is nothing organically wrong with him may provide temporary reassurance but it will not alleviate his underlying anxiety. Similarly, trying to talk someone out of a severe anxiety reaction, such as a fear of heights, does little good because the fear is based on something irrational or subconsious to begin with.

For severe symptoms, tranquilizers may be prescribed while psychotherapy is undertaken. Transient anxiety precipitated by a particular crisis may respond best to talking through the problem, with a tranquilizer prescribed for a brief period only if the symptoms are severe. Phobias can often be treated effectively by behavior therapy using relaxation techniques, among others, but sometimes there is a risk of the anxiety reaction re emerging in a different form.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Mother doesn't want me to get a parakeet because we have two cats. Can't you keep a bird safe from two cats? — K.A.

P.S. What if I got a sturdy cage and kept the door shut when I was gone?

DEAR K.A.: The cage almost certainly wouldn't be sturdy enough and, sooner or later, someone would leave the room's door open when you were gone. In some rooms where there is simply a blank wall, a sturdy bracket mounted high in the wall might hold a cage high enough to keep it out of reach. (The area should be relatively free of drafts, too, of course.) If you try this and your cats begin practicing broad jumping and various climbing techniques, maybe you had better try keeping that room's door shut, also.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My boyfriend made me feel like an idiot for doing a breast examination on my basset hound Dora. Why isn't this a good idea? Dora is five, she had one litter of puppies two years ago and still has prominent breasts, some of which would rate a D cup if dogs were wearing them these days. — R.R.

DEAR R.R.: There is nothing dumb about giving Dora a complete breast examination occasionally. Mammary tumors (many of them malignant) can occur in canines. Of course, any lumps found should be checked out by the doctor. While not all small lumps found in mammary tissue are potentially dangerous tumors, enough are to make the procedure worthwhile.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I've got some midget minnows which are just over an inch long.

They have a green cast and transparent body. I have them in a tank by themselves. How do you keep such delicate little fish going? They are eating well, though I am feeding them very fine food so they can swallow it. — J.B.

DEAR J.B.: If this is the midget minnow from Ceylon (Horandandiya Atukoralia), it's already full size. Fragile as it appears, the fish is far from it. It can handle a variety of acid and alkaline, hard and soft waters, and temperatures from 70 to 80 deg. F. It can, in fact.

Fruit Tree Pruning Time is Here

jack beastall

Fruit tree pruning on the southern end of Vancouver Island is done during the last week of February into the first two weeks of March if temperatures are in the mild range and no Arctic air is likely to invade the area.

The reasons for pruning fruit trees are to encourage the formation of fruit spurs and overcome the natural habit of biennial bearing; to encourage a certain amount of new wood growth on those fruits that do make fruit spurs; to maintain the delicate balance between root, top growth, and fruit production. These reasons are fully explained in books available at the public libraries.

The fruit we grow is actually a seed capsule. A fruit tree will bear fruit without any pruning, but the quality and texture may not be to the gardener's liking.

When a fruit tree is drastically pruned to reduce its size it takes about five years before the delicate balance is restored, and little, if any, fruit is produced during that period.

TOOLS: Using substitute tools, dirty tools, or blunt tools, can cause damage to plant tissues, leaving wounds which are slow to heal and permit the entry of disease spores.

The tools needed include a pair of good quality hand secateurs for cuts up to one-half inch in diameter. A pair of long handled loppers is used for cuts from one-half-inch to 1½ inches and a pruning saw for larger cuts.

The 12 ft. metal extension pruner is about the easiest pruner to use and well worth its cost. The blade is operated by a rope which runs over a seris of pulleys to increase the power of the cut. Cuts of 1½ to 2 ins. are like cutting a block of cheese.

The now popular Japanese curved pruning saw comes with the extension pruner. The blade may be attached to the top of the pruner, or fitted to a separate handle for hand use.

BEFORE PRUNING see that all tools are sharp and clean, a job which takes more time than the 20 minutes needed to prune a tree.

STUDY each tree carefully from all angles and decide exactly what parts will be removed and which will be shortened. Estimate the 10% which is safe to remove and limit the pruning for this year to that amount.

FRUITING: Apples, pears, and plums bear fruit on fruiting spurs. These are short angular growths found along the older lateral growths and the main branches.

On apples the fruiting spurs will continue bearing fruits for about 15 years. On pears the spurs survive for around 10 years, and on plums for five years. Pruning every year to encourage new spurs is necessary on plums.

When a young growth of 6 to 8 inches in length is reduced to two leaf buds it is likely to form a fruiting spur in a year or so. These spurs make growth one year, bear fruit the second year, make growth the third year and bear fruit the fourth year. Since unpruned trees tend to make fruit spurs at a given age the trees become biennial fruiting, a condition pruning is designed to correct.

Fruit spurs are never cut off as long as they remain in production. The gardener who removes all those silly little twiggy pieces will have no fruit for five years until new fruit spurs are formed.

YOUNG TREES: Usually purchased as 2-year-olds and planted from November until mid-March. Pruning for the first four or five years concentrates on forming a good branch system that is strong enough to bear heavy crops without breaking.

Three to four main branches are selected, placed spirally around the trunk and extending N,S,E, and W. All other branches are removed, also unwanted growths are nipped off as they appear.

The growth made each year has bark of a different color and texture. That made the previous year is cut back half way, and the leader at the top of the trunk is pruned the same way. Growth buds at the centre of each year's growth are the strongest and make heavier branches than those at the top or the base of the growth.

PEACHES bear fruit on new shoots made the previous growing season. These shoots are cut off with the fruit attached when the crop is gathered in August. At this time of year old wood is removed, but last year's shoots are preserved for fruiting this year.

PLUMS: If severely pruned at any age will split their bark and ooze gum. Disease spores enter the gum and the limbs gradually die back, eventualy killing the whole tree. When this happens the underground roots send up sucker growths over their entire length and the gardener has the expense of root removal.

CHERRIES: fruit on new wood made the previous year. Pruning is always light to prevent gumming, removing some of the old wood and encouraging some new growth. Fruit forms higher on the tree each year, and severe pruning is not possible on older trees.

BURN the prunings as soon as the trees have been pruned. The young tips are where insects lay their eggs, which will hatch in due time if left lying around.

FERTILIZING follows pruning. Only fertilizer applied now before the tree starts growth will be of any benefit to this year's crop. Fertilizer reaching the roots later in the season causes unnecessary wood growth and lessens the storage life of the fruit.

To fertilize, start two feet from the trunk and punch holes in the soil eight inches deep in a circle and one foot apart. Make as many circles as needed at twelve to fourteen inch spacing to cover the area to two feet beyond the extreme edge of the branches.

Put a teaspoon of fertilizer into each hole then water well to dissolve the fertilizer and fill the holes with soil. Watering is important as the fertilizer must be at root level when growth starts.

When pruning, exercise care to have ladders on a firm footing and lashed to the trunk or branches if ncessary. Do not damage bark by climbing into the tree with heavy boots.

Work for Week

If spring cabbage survived early winter frosts, give each plant light dressing of nitrogen. The same to each kale plant. Or use one teaspoon of 6-8-6 to each plant, watered in if not raining.

In frost free greenhouse, porch, or covered coldframe, sow seed of summer cabbage, early cauliflower, and Early Simpson lettuce for later transplanting to rows. Endive is also a hardy spring salad.

Pruning of fruit trees and deciduous ornamental trees is worked on in mild weather from now to end of month.

If not done, plant garlic, shallots, and Jerusalem artichoke tubers — all in deep soils that are well drained and yet moisture holding during summer.

Hardwood cuttings taken last fall and set outdoors are showing promising growth bud, but don't disturb. Many will root in April or May. At that time see they do not dry out.

Clematis jackmanni and its hybrids flower on new wood made this coming season, so cut back all long growth, leaving two buds on each strong shoot where it joins old wood.

The Punishment Is for Talking

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Tiziana Sozzi, the first Italian woman jockey who recently caused a sensation by posing nude for an Italian men's magazine, was fined and suspended from racing for four months after a controversial interview in which she had bitterly criticized Italy's horse racing world.

The Italian racing commission which punished the pretty, 27-year-old pointed out the disciplinary measure was taken because of the interview, not her posing.

Sozzi, who contended horse racing was not really fair in Italy, said she will appeal the suspension and the $1,089 fine.

She also said she would continue her career as a jockey in England.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

The life of faith is lived simultaneously in two environments. That is a basic biblical insight. First, there is what can be called "the environment of grace" with grace understood simply as the love of God impringing on our lives. This is the environment in which one is sustained by prayer and worship and other disciplines of faith.

But the life of faith is also lived in the everyday world. To try to live in the environment of grace and not involve oneself in the affairs of the world any more than is necessary for sustenance and survival is not to affirm God's purposes but to deny them. Piety cultivated in isolation from the world is always in danger of going sour.

On the other hand, the insight and the motivation and the courage needed for creative, compassionate life in the world are not self-renewing, but must be constantly nourished in the environment of grace.

In our time we have seen some Christian activism petering out into ineffectual do-goodism because it has not been adequately nourished by grace. God has joined together the environment of grace and the environment of the everyday world and let no man put them asunder.

I would illustrate this principle from the writings of two great men of our time, men who lived simultaneously in the two environments as they took the way of Christian faith—although both sat rather loosely to the conventional orthodoxies.

Dag Hammarskjold, the Swedish diplomat who died in an air accident in Africa in 1961 while serving as Secretary General of the United Nations, kept a spiritual notebook, parts of which were published after his death under the title Markings.

In this notebook he wrote, "In our era, the road to holiness necessarily passes through the world of action." (He made it clear in his book that for him "holiness" is a quality of life which is sustained from beyond the here-and-now and which gives meaning and purpose to life in the here-and-now.)

The second man is the French Jesuit mystic and scientist, Father Teilhard de Cahardin. During his life most of his writings were suppressed by the authorities of his Church on grounds of heretical tendencies, but in the years since death in 1955 his writings have been extensively published. In a little book of meditations, Hymn of the Universe, he described himself in this way: "He drank of life everywhere as at a sacred spring."

He experienced the grace of God at the mass and in other specifically religious situations—but he also found the reality and the energy and the love of God in every segment of life, including his scientific research.

These two simple statements delineate something of the nature of the life of faith in two environments and point the way to meaning and fulfilment which are in faith.

TV project considered

The United Church is considering a $500,000 prime time television program package next year, The United Church Observer says in its February issue.

Plans call for a one-hour program in January, 1980, and three half-hour programs during the rest of the year on the CTV network, the story says.

The programs, to be largely financed through viewer donations, would be variety type shows with an emphasis on music, not worship services, dramas or talk shows.

The Lenten series of Wednesday noon forum lectures begins Ash Wednesday, Feb. 28 in St. John's Church, 1611 Quadra.

The series of seven speakers will deal with a variety of subjects under the theme Values in the Human Struggle. The noon-hour program is designed to make it possible for people working in the downtown area to bring their lunch, have free tea or coffee, listen to a stimulating speaker dealing with a contemporary issue, raise a question, and still be back at the place of work by 1 p.m. Last year more than 300 persons came to the Ash Wednesday session.

The opening speaker will be Gordon Fairweather, chief commissioner of the Canadian Human Rights Commission, Ottawa. Fairweather was formerly Conservative MP for Fundy-Royal and was external affairs critic for many years.

The attorney-general of New Brunswick for four years, he was appointed to his present position in 1977. He is a member of the board of trustees of the Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific.

Fairweather will deal with the broad subject of human rights and the Canadian attempts to deal with discrimination at many levels. Not everyone agrees with the legislation and there is opposition to implementing the law.

The noon forum suggests that the speaker present his/her subject in 20 minutes and allow 20 minutes for debate and discussion. Other speakers in the series include:

Cyril Powles of Toronto on International Development; Keith Jobson of Victoria on Punishment; Jim Antoine of Fort Simpson, on Land; Madeleine Sheilds of Victoria on One-Parent Families; George Morrison of Mayne Island on Business and Gordon Baker of Saskatoon on Faith.

Canon Robert MacRae, of St. John's Church, has invited the public to the complete series. More information 383-7169.

McMillan

BIBLE EXPERT COMING

The general secretary of the Canadian Bible Society will be in Victoria next weekend. He's a man much in demand as a conference speaker in this country and in the United States.

The Rev. Dr. Kenneth McMillan is a Canadian church leader who is aware of the challenges of the New Age and he is a contributor to various periodicals.

He will be speaking at Emmanuel Baptist Church, 2121 Cedar Hill Cross Road, on Sunday, March 4 at all services—9:30 a.m., 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.—and will be guest speaker at the Canadian Bible Society annual meeting the same day at 3 p.m. in First Baptist Church, Quadra and North Park.

A minister of The Presbyterian Church in Canada, he holds the degrees of Bachelor of Divinity and Doctor of Divinity from Knox College, Toronto, from which he graduated in 1942.

He has held pastorates at Burgoyne and Dunblane in the County of Bruce, Ont., Drummond Hill Presbyterian Church, Niagara Falls, Ont., and St. Andrew's Church, Guelph, Ont.

McMillan was appointed general secretary of the Canadian Bible Society in 1957.

He is a past-Moderator of the Presbyterian Synod of Toronto and Kingston. He is a member of the General Committee of the United Bible Societies and of the United Bible Societies Regional Committee for the Americas.

The United Bible Societies is the world organization which co-ordinates the work of the 55 national Bible Societies in the World.

The Bible Society is at work in more than 150 countries and in recent years McMillan's travels have taken him around the world twice. He has visited Bible Society headquarters and mission fields of the Canadian churches on all six continents.

Among his writings which have been widely distributed are What But Thy Grace and The Church Encounters the New Age.

World prayer day Friday

The World Day of Prayer will be celebrated Friday in Greater Victoria.

Rev. Geoffrey Smith, for many years a missionary in Zambia, will be the speaker at the main service arranged by the Ecumenical Women's Outreach for 2 p.m. Friday at Metropolitan United Church, Quadra at Pandora.

It is fitting that Smith should be the speaker, because Christian women in Zambia have prepared the materials for the day of prayer. Zambian Christians have asked world churches to pray with them for spiritual growth in knowledge, faith, hope and love.

A brief noon-hour service will be held in Centennial Square, weather permitting, or in the antechamber of City hall, from noon to 12:30 p.m. Rev. John Watson, incoming president of the Greater Victoria Council of Churches, will take part.

Speaker is Mrs. Jara Smith, chairman of the Victoria presbytery of the United Church, who served with her husband, Rev. Geoffrey Smith, and was active in the area of Zambia where this year's service of worship was prepared.

In the evening the young people of Greater Victoria will meet at Grace Lutheran Church, 1273 Fort. The service will be informal, with music and conversation fellowship and interchange between youth groups. Refreshments will be served in the church hall.

For those unable to attend the downtown Day of Prayer main service, the day will be observed in a number of suburban churches.

Times and places are as follows: for Belmont and Oak Bay area, 2 p.m., Oak Bay United Church, 1369 Mitchell, speaker Mrs. Jara Smith; Gordon Head and Cadboro Bay, 2 p.m., St. George's Anglican Church, 3909 St. George's; Cedar Hill area, 2 p.m., St. Luke's Anglican Church, speaker Rev. Ron Attwell; Gorge-Wilkinson and View Royal, 1:30 p.m., St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, speaker Rev. Dr. Wee Chong Tan; Cordova Bay, 1:30 p.m., St. David's By The Sea, Cordova Bay Road; Esquimalt, 2 p.m., Our Lady Queen of Peace Church, 849 Old Esquimalt; Colwood and Langford, 8 p.m., St. Peter's, Belmont Park, speaker Miss Esther Bennett.

A shortened service is being provided for many nursing homes and senior citizen's residences.

The World Day of Prayer is celebrated in 160 countries.

Offerings from the day of prayer are sent, through the Women's Inter-Church Council of Canada, to help those in hospitals, schools or orphanages, for cyclone relief, aid to aged or handicapped and for special needs in Canada and abroad.

ORGAN SOLOIST Kathy Edge, baritone Jim Scott and soprano Peggy Packard rehearse.

Prairie night set for Sunday

Centennial United Church will hold its 34th annual prairie night at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at the church, 649 Gorge Road at David Street. Rev. G.A. McMechan's sermon topic is Why This?

Prairie night was started at Centennial United as a special event to say "thank you" to winter visitors from the prairies for sharing in Christian fellowship and worship with the congregation while in Victoria, to wish them the best on their return to their prairie homes and duties and to say "hope to see you next winter."

Special music for the event will be provided by the senior choir directed by Ernie Williams. Guest artists include baritone Jim Scott, a member of the Centennial church choir, organ soloist Kathy Edge, a music major at UVic and a student of Edward Norman, and soprano Peggy Packard, known in Victoria as a painter and sculptor and for her work in opera.

After the worship service, there will be a community hymn sing and fellowship over tea and coffee.

Whether from the prairies or not, all are invited to share in the fellowship.

Parking is available.

Weight of Winter

Even mighty Niagara Falls bows to nature when it decides to cast its wintery spell. Here a tree near Prospect Point overlooking the American falls bends under weight of ice and snow. Winter offers some breath-taking views of the falls.

Admitted Hookers Can't be Bounced

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration officers have been instructed to let alleged or convicted foreign prostitutes into the country under a new open-door policy, Toronto Progressive Conservative MP Otto Jelinek said Friday.

Jelinek said the policy is wrong even though prostitution is not an offence in Canada and the immigration department thus has no grounds to bar the entry of prostitutes.

"It destroys not only our moral senses but prostitution creates crime," he told reporters after raising the matter in the Commons.

He showed reporters a November, 1978, memorandum to immigration officers from the head of immigration enforcement branch.

The memo said legal opinion had been sought as a result of some questions about prostitutes entering the country.

"It should be borne in mind that prostitution, per se, is not an offence in Canada," the memo said.

Therefore, "an officer must grant admission or allow the alleged or admitted prostitute to remain in Canada."

Canterbury Tales Swing

The musical version of Canterbury Tales might cause Chaucer to do some turning in his grave. It would not be from anger, however, but an agitation caused by the frustration of not being able to dance, sing and celebrate along with the cast in this lively visualization of his great work.

He might be puzzled, but certainly grateful, that while the music belongs to the 20th century musical stage, the humor of the play is definitely Chaucerian.

The production is being staged Wednesday and Thursday at 8 p.m. by the Music Theatre Workshop of the Department of Art and Music Education at the University of Victoria. Dramatic director is Hetty Clews, well known through her actvity with Victoria Theatre Guild. Among her productions there have been The Little Foxes and Uncle Vanya.

Mrs.Clews is an instructor at UVic and has worked with UVic musical director Dale McIntosh on many successful productions in the past few years.

The cast is made up of students from various departments, including music education, theatre, and arts. Some public school teachers are taking part. Performances will be at the University Centre Auditorium and tickets at $2 are available at the University Centre and Hillside Mall ticket centre.

On Wednesday, March 7, the group will take the show to the Isabelle Reader Theatre, Spencer School, Langford. Curtain time will be 8 p.m. and tickets are available at the Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre.

Musical Poetry

For people who relish unusual combinations of poetry with music, University of Victoria music faculty has something special in store Sunday and Monday. The program for the second in a series of faculty recitals will consist of Walton's Facade and Schoenberg's Pierrot Lunaire.

The dialogue that accompanies Facade is based on poems by Edith Sitwell. Carl Hare, professor in UVic's theatre department, and his actress-director wife, Clara, will be speaking the dialogue. The Schoenberg work features a "singer-speaker" and this role will be taken by renowned Canadian mezzo soprano Phyllis Mailing. George Corwin will conduct Pierrot Lunaire, while Facade is being directed by Jesse Read of the school of music.

Both performances will take place in the Music Building recital hall. Tickets at $3 for adults and $2 for senior citizens are available at the school of music general office or may be purchased at the door. Seating in the recital hall is limited to 200.

Phoenix Festival Finale

There will be four performances of a double bill as University of Victoria concludes its month-long festival of one-act plays at the Phoenix Theatre. Featured will be The Golden Fleece, by A.R. Gurney Jr., and A Duck in the Chickenhouse, by Sara Gaddes.

The program will run from Wednesday through Saturday, starting at 8 p.m.

Gurney's The Golden Fleece presents the classic tragedy of Jason and Medea in a modern context. It contrasts their intense passion with the relative banality of modern marriage. It was premiered in New York in 1968 and described by the New York Times as "a frequently amusing, but ultimately harrowing tale that proves the universality of the Jason-Medea theme."

Chris Sears is the director of the play, fulfilling a project in his Masters study at UVic.

A Duck in the Chickenhouse initiates what is expected to become an annual feature of the Phoenix Theatre program — presentation of the winning play from the student playwriting competition co-sponsored by the departments of theatre and creative writing.

Miss Gaddes was winner of this year's — the first — competition. Her play is being directed by Alan Hughes, a member of the theatre faculty and one of the judges of the contest. He is collaborating with Gaddes in arriving at the final acting script.

The play focuses on a middle-aged woman who returns to her home after a 20-year absence in an attempt to come to terms with her background and tie up the loose ends in her life. It is a dark comedy set in modern rural B.C.

Craft Slides at Gallery

A showing of slides taken at the World Craft Council in Kyoto, Japan, last summer will be presented by Circle Craft Society at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

The slides will be shown by Carole Sabiston and Robin Hopper, who are donating their time to help raise funds for the Circle Craft Society. The slides are from their own collections and focus upon the fibre and clay exhibits at the World Craft Council. The two widely known artist-craftspeople will elaborate on the themes in a discussion accompanying the presentation.

An admission charge of $1.50 for the slide showing and discussion will help fund the continuing work of Circle Craft Society.

Something 'Swell'

Visitors to the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria are likely to find themselves awed and astonished when confronted with a highly unusual and immense sculpture occupying an entire gallery. The work, entitled Swell, is by Vancouver sculptor Douglas Senft.

It is fabricated from raw plywood and lumber and is a development of a larger outdoor work, Aldergrove Valley, which the artist recently built with the aid of a Canada Council Materials Grant. It is constructed on a modular principle with the identical geometric units rising from the floor and falling back down in rhythmic unity.

Opening Wednesday will be a show of particular local interest. This consists of the paintings of Thomas Bamford (1861-1941). These paintings consist of accurate depictions of local scenes painted around the turn of the century.

Views of the inner harbor at the time, Clover Point, Magazine Island and Gordon Head are shown under various light and weather conditions.

Bamford came to Victoria from England about 1882 and while here worked for Albion Iron Works designing ornamental embellishments for naval architecture and the surveyor-general. He executed many documentary landscapes while travelling extensively through the province.

On Saturday Vancouver artist Helen Griffin's Wildflowers with Trees and Mountains will open.

After completing a Masters degree in Chinese Studies at University of B.C., Griffin's work took a decidedly Eastern turn. Imbued with the philosophy of harmonizing with nature, she had taken her training in Chinese painting and dealt with the landscape and fauna of B.C.

For her Victoria exhibition she has chosen wild flowers of the province as well as some landscapes of the shores, lovingly captured with brush and ink. All the works are for sale.

The Bamford and Griffin exhibitions will remain through mid-April.

Communication Through Culture

TOVELL . . . sending our artists abroad

How do you show people in other countries something distinctly Canadian? It's not difficult in theatre, but what about other disciplines? How do you justify public fund expenditure on sending artists and groups abroad, and evaluate the long-term results?

Those are some of the problems that confront officials of Canada's department of external affairs in dealing with cultural exchange.

"The generally accepted view of foreign affairs a decade or so ago was of glamor and adventure in high places abroad," says Freeman M. Tovell, deputy director-general of the bureau of public affairs in Ottawa. At the moment he and his wife, Rosita, are living in Victoria while he spends what he describes as a "working sabbatical" as visiting lecturer in history at the University of Victoria.

The program under which he is spending the year at UVic, lecturing, participating in seminars and writing, has been in effect 10 years, but this is the first time UVic has shared in it.

Freeman Tovell joined the Department in 1945. He has filled many capacities, including being ambassador to Peru and Bolivia in the sixties and head of the Cultural Affairs Division from 1970 to 1975.

External Affairs has experienced a changing emphasis in the last few years, says Tovell. Subjects which were once considered purely domestic — environment, energy, food, status of women — have now become international and are main issues of foreign policy. The role of the diplomat has undergone a drastic change. He has had to become familiar with things not formerly his concern. And then there is the question of culture.

"The change has been gradual on the cultural side. If you go back to 1951 you will find in the Massey Commission report the statement that 'our cultural relations are still in an elementary and almost nonexistent stage'."

The first positive step toward developing a coordinated program, according to Tovell, was not taken until 1963 following the cultural explosion in this country in the 50s and 60s.

In 1965 the federal cabinet approved an expansion of a modest reciprocal program with France, Belgium and Switzerland. Italy, Germany and the Netherlands — countries providing substantial groups of Canada's population — were added. And in the same year a division responsible for cultural affairs was created within the department of external affairs.

A first program was developed with the U.S.S.R in 1971 and with the People's Republic of China in 1972. Canada now had much to offer and many of its artists and groups had reached an international level of excellence, Tovell wrote in a 1976 issue of International Perspectives, an External Affairs publication.

Three main objectives of the program were outlined in the article, numbers two and three being, "to reflect internationally the growing creativity and scope of Canada's cultural scene and thereby improve professional opportunities for Canadian artists, academics, writers and others, and open new markets for Canadian cultural exports", and "to provide continuing and new sources of enrichment of the national life".

Culture, Tovell agrees, is a word many people shy away from. In fact, he considers it a difficult word to define to everyone's satisfaction. He offers Lord Keynes' "the civilizing arts of life," or the Oxford English Dictionary's "the intellectual side of civilization," but prefers Northrop Frye's concept of "the communicating arts".

He points out, however, that "the civilizing arts of life" is a close definition, as cultural relations include all areas of the performing arts, visual arts, radio, television, film, tape, athletics and sport (he calls the latter "the perspiring arts") and the whole range of academic endeavor. He sums up by saying that the objective core of cultural relations is "communication between people".

The Stratford Festival Company, Theatre du Nouveau Monde, Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver Symphony Orchestras, Royal Winnipeg Ballet, Anna Wyman Dancers, the Canadian Brass, Orford and Purcell String Quartets and individual artists such as Oscar Peterson, Liona Boyd and Morisette Bouchard are among those having toured various countries under External Affairs auspices.

What has been distinctively Canadian among our exports? Well, there was a play by Michelle Tremblay that was taken to France; the Toronto Workshop has gone abroad with a visibly Canadian product; Men of the Deep, a group from Cape Breton, travelled through the mining communities of Manchuria. In the visual arts an exhibition of Canadian landscape painting of the 19th and 20th centuries arranged by the National Gallery went to China a few years ago. It was viewed in Shanghai and Peking by 80,000 Chinese. And the B.C. government made available an exhibition in Paris of the paintings of Emily Carr.

"We try to present a balanced program," Tovell explains. "The idea is to send a variety of artists and shows that are representative of all Canada. There is a considerable interest abroad in native cultures and here government funding is essential. Many things just would not happen without it.

"But the criterion of excellence has to be high. The present international market is extremely competitive and our people are exposed to formidible standards of criticism when they go abroad. If it happens to be a second tour for a group it is always tougher — the critics are less apt to be kind."

In making decisions the department has a standing committee that acts in an advisory capacity and includes representatives of Canada Council, the National Museums Corporation and Sports Canada.

"When considering a project we have to be careful concerning potential audience reception, especially in the area of the performing and visual arts. Many questions have to be asked and answered satisfactorily before a final decision can be made: will the theatre be adequate for the nature of the play? Will the paintings receive suitable protection? what revenue can be expected?

"In theatre language poses difficulties. In Moscow and Leningrad instant translation is available in the theatres. Also the Russians are magnificent linguists; they like to hear plays and operas in the original language. But it's not the same in other foreign cities."

"Transportation is a major concern. The problem is compounded in arranging a tour of China because there is no box-office revenue to be considered. In China tickets are issued free."

Then there is always, like a conscience nagging from the sidelines, the question of justifying those large public fund expenditures, Tovell points out. How are the results to be evaluated in the long term?

Tovell sheds light on that question in the closing paragraphs of his International Perspectives article.

"Certainly Canada's position in the world will be judged as much by its achievements in the arts, letters and sciences, and in learning, as by its other endeavors ... There is a relation between the export of culture and trade ... There is also a relation between culture and efforts to make Canada better known abroad. It is perhaps no exaggeration to say that, in the long run, it is through the medium of culture that we can establish more clearly than in any other way a feeling of respect, born of appreciation — perhaps even admiration — of what other people stand for and have acccomplished.

"Finally, cultural exchanges, well planned and executed, can open many doors and keep those already open ajar."

Ex-Mountie Sentenced

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A former RCMP officer has been given a one-year suspended sentence for indecent assault.

Joseph Latraverse, 24, resigned from the force after being charged.

Court was told Latraverse let himself into a woman's Burnaby home April 12, 1977, and went to the bedroom where she was sleeping.

He undressed, woke the woman up and laid on top of her.

Tory Motion Cost $15,982?

OTTAWA (CP) — A Liberal MP has calculated that a Conservative attempt to adjourn the Commons this week cost taxpayers $15,982.23.

Simma Holt of Vancouver Kingsway said the Commons did nothing for 110 minutes Wednesday while it waited to vote on the Conservative adjournment motion. She arrived at her total cost figure by saying it costs $140.29 a minute to run the Commons.

The Conservatives moved their adjournment motion because most of the economic ministers were out of town during the daily question period. There have been charges and counter-charges on who was responsible for the long wait to vote.

Steve Paproski, Edmonton Centre MP who is Conservative whip, responded to Mrs. Holt by saying the delay in the vote was the fault of his Liberal opposite number.

Mrs. Holt was ruled out of order when she attempted to move a motion calling for the repayment of the taxpayers.

Smithers Judge Goes After 'Unwise' Remark

VANCOUVER (CP) — A provincial court judge whose comments about native Indians were described by a superior court as thoughtless and unwise has been transferred out of northern British Columbia.

However, chief provincial court Judge Lawrence Goulet said Judge A. S. K. Cook asked for the transfer for personal reasons.

Goulet said he did not want to discuss the matter because he wanted to avoid blowing it up into a major controversy.

He said Cook, a former Vancouver city prosecutor posted to Smithers about 20 months ago, will be transferred somewhere in the Vancouver area.

The remarks in question were made in Hazelton when four persons charged with fishing in non-tidal waters appeared before Cook.

When Cook suggested the matter be heard in Smithers, about 100 kilometres to the south, the defence lawyer said it would be difficult for the defendants to make the journey.

Cook said that "if there is a drinking party in Terrace everyone can get a lift."

The B.C. Supreme Court was asked to bar Cook from hearing the case on the grounds he was biased against native Indians.

Kamloops Buys Debugger To Halt Information Leaks

KAMLOOPS (CP) — This interior British Columbia city has purchased a $395 electronic device capable of showing if a person or his premises are under electronic surveillance.

Graydon Hayward, city administrator, said Friday the device is being used to halt an alarming flow of the city's confidential information to unauthorized persons.

"I don't think any other B.C. city has the problems we do with confidential information leaking out," he said, adding he believes Kamloops is the first community in B.C. to purchase the device.

Ron Kask, director of administrative services, said the debugger, about the size of two cigarette packages and manufactured by a Vancouver company, is used to check council chambers before meetings are held.

The bug detector is one of several steps Hayward has taken to stop leaks of classified material.

"We're tightening up a lot of procedures and asking people not to leave things lying around," he said. Top level documents also are being coded to determine who released them when unathorized copies are found.

Caterpillar's Sealed and Lubricated Track is a feature that all by itself makes Cat 931 and 941B loaders your best small machine buy.

Why? Because Sealed Track alone can increase track life by as much as 30%. And you know what 30% longer life will mean in dollars on your operation.

Sealed and Lubricated Track eliminates internal wear as a critical maintenance consideration. It extends bushing life, reduces "snaky" track, and improves your opportunities to rebuild or reuse parts. What's more, Sealed and Lubricated Track runs quieter and rolls easier because there's less friction.

There are lots of other money-saving features on the 62 horsepower 931 and 80 horsepower 941B; large displacement engines, precise pedal steer, true on-the-go power shifting, sealed loader linkage. But when undercarriage is the major maintenance expense, why not go with the machine that gives you longest life, lowest cost per hour.

Catepillar Sealed and Lubricated Track. It makes the Cat 931 and 941B track loaders your best value in the 1-¼, 1-½ yard class.

SO YOU HAVE NEVER ANswered an ad, why not start with this one? Haven't you been concerned because there is no one to share a walk on the beach, dine by the fire, enjoy music, or go to the theatre with? You have a sense of humour, are tall, active and in good health (you don't smoke or drink to excess). You are in the prime of life, early 50's, and financially secure. You are considerate, affectionate, and are well informed. Why not gamble? Maybe you'll meet the woman who would appreciate these fine attributes. Victoria Press Box 343.

If your child is in care (s)he is receiving help.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

A special thanks to Father Hanley of St. Joseph's Parish; to Margaret Wilmshurst, organist; to the pallbearers; to Sands Funeral Home; to all the ladies who prepared and served lunch to our families and friends following the service and to our friends and neighbors who helped to sustain us in so many ways. The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

City Man Jailed for Rape

PENTICTON (CP) — Sennen Dominic Charleson, 24, of Victoria, was sentenced Friday to two years less a day in jail after being convicted of raping a 30-year-old woman at a hotel here April 21, 1978.

Judge A.D.C. Washington recommended in county court Charleson serve his term at the Vancouver Island Regional Correctional Centre.

Charleson was convicted Feb. 15 after the judge rejected a defence lawyer's argument that he committed the act while suffering from hypoglycemia, a condition affecting the body's blood-sugar level.

Before The Judge

A 20-year-old Saanich man released last year from an Ontario prison was sentenced to 18 months in jail after pleading guilty in provincial court Friday to break-in and wilful damage charges.

Ronald Hansen of 1870 McKenzie was found by police Dec. 12 inside the Medical Building at 1105 Pandora with a younger brother.

While police were taking him to headquarters Hansen kicked out a window in the police car, court was told.

Hansen's counsel said his client was inebriated at the time and was angered when police accidentally closed the car door on his leg. He kicked at the door, damaging the window. He said Hansen regretted having involved his brother in the incident and accepted the blame himself.

Judge William Ostler noted that Hansen was decent enough to accept the blame.

He sentenced him to 18 months on the break-in charge and one-month concurrently for the damage to the police car. He recommended the sentence be served at Redonda Bay.

Hansen's brother will appear later on the break-in charge.

A 30-day jail sentence followed by 12 months probation was imposed by Judge Fred Green on 20-year-old Robert Richard Hookway of 1140 Oscar.

He appeared for sentencing after pleading guilty earlier to forging a prescription for a codiene-based drug Jan. 11.

Green recommended Hookway receive drug counselling.

Judge Ostler ordered a pre-sentence report for a 28-year-old Sooke man who pleaded guilty to two counts of breaking, entering and theft.

Mark Hemmingsten of 1682 Whiffen Spit on the night of Feb. 20 broke into to a medical office at 303 Goldstream and was later found with an anesthetic missing from the office.

The court was told Hemmingsten and a co-accused, his common-law wife, Lora Bethell, 28, were found the following night hiding in the basement of the Medical Building at 1105 Pandora after police had arrived in response to an alarm. Several offices had been broken into and a quantity of pills were missing.

Ostler set March 16 for sentencing Hemmingsten who appeared alone before him. The judge refused to accept a guilty plea from Bethell because he believed he was acquainted with relations of her's.

She appeared later before Judge Green who asked for a pre-sentence report after pleading guilty to the single break-in charge she faced with Hemmingsten.

Crown prosecutor Robert Mulligan said the woman's previous convictions were to a large extent related to seeking illicit drugs. He said she was on probation for another offence at the time of the break-in.

Because she is in custody, Green requested the pre-sentence report be prepared in time for sentencing March 9. He further requested a separate psychiatric assessment be made before then.

Robert Twyman, 70, of 4525 Seawood Terrace, $400.

Robert Rawluk, 22, of 1347 Glenridge, $350.

Douglas Ross, 64, of 317 Stewart, $500.

Dieting? Record It

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A weight-reducing plan that makes patients write down everything they eat before they eat is more successful than other reducing plans because it avoids complex and unrealistic demands, says a psychology professor.

Prof. Irwin Lublin of California State University of Los Angeles said most reducing plans ultimately fail because they ask an overweight person to follow too many rules.

"We never ask them to give up their favorite foods," Lublin said.

He said more than 150 people, most of them women, have gone through his program since it began in 1970 and at least 90 per cent lost weight, some more than 100 pounds.

W.A.C. Bennett: His life and times . . Pages 5, 6

Former Premier William Andrew Cecil Bennett, the man who changed the face of his adopted British Columbia, died in his sleep in Kelowna Friday night at the age of 78.

He had been in hospital since Feb. 9.

Jon Arnett, press secretary to Bill Bennett, the current B.C. premier and son of W.A.C. Bennett, said Bennett's wife May, daughter Anita Tozer and son R. J. Bennett were at his bedside when his heart failed at 10:30 p.m. at Kelowna General Hospital.

Premier Bennett flew home from Vancouver this morning.

Bennett said that his father had led B.C. through its greatest period of expansion in both the interior and the North.

"He had the vision, and he took his vision and made things happen," the premier said.

Simultaneous memorial services will be held in Kelowna at the First United Church and in Victoria at the Metropolitan United Church, 1411 Quadra, at 2 p.m. Tuesday.

Rev. Dr. A.E. King will officiate at the Victoria service and Rev. Dr. Clyde Woollard in Kelowna.

Cremation will follow.

Originally a New Brunswick farm boy who burned Liberals in effigy, W.A.C. Bennett served as premier of B:.C. for 20 years, the longest unbroken tenure in the province's history.

He had left politics, his first love, in 1972 after an

British Columbians will be able to register their sympathy over former premier W.A.C. Bennett's death in a book of condolences to be placed in the rotunda of the Legislative Buildings for an indefinite period starting Monday.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis also said arrangements are being made to hold a memorial service in Victoria next week following the family's funeral services.

Curtis joined other leading British Columbians in praising Bennett as a person of vision and courage who left a lasting mark on the province.

He said Bennett touched the lives of everyone.

"As with so many other younger British Columbians, he influenced my life indirectly . . . certainly he intensified my interest in politics."

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said B.C. has lost a great citizen.

"He will be missed. It is the passing of an era. It was a time when politics were very close to every corner of this province.

"I hope that every citizen recognizes the great contribution he made to this province."

Progressive-Conservartive leader Vic Stephen called Bennett's death a great loss.

Former Tory leader Dr. Scott Wallace said Bennett was "the right man at the right time."

"There is no question he was a man of outstanding capacity, foresight and tremendous determination to follow his own commitments and feelings of what he believed was right for B.C."

Gordon Shrum, former co-chairman of B.C. Hydro, called Bennett one of the "most courageous and imaginative political leaders I have ever known.

"It will be a long while before we have another man of his particular qualities as a political leader in Canada."

Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, Shrum's Hydro partner, praised Bennett for his far-sighted policies.

"He did as much as anybody in our history to open up the hinterland of the province."

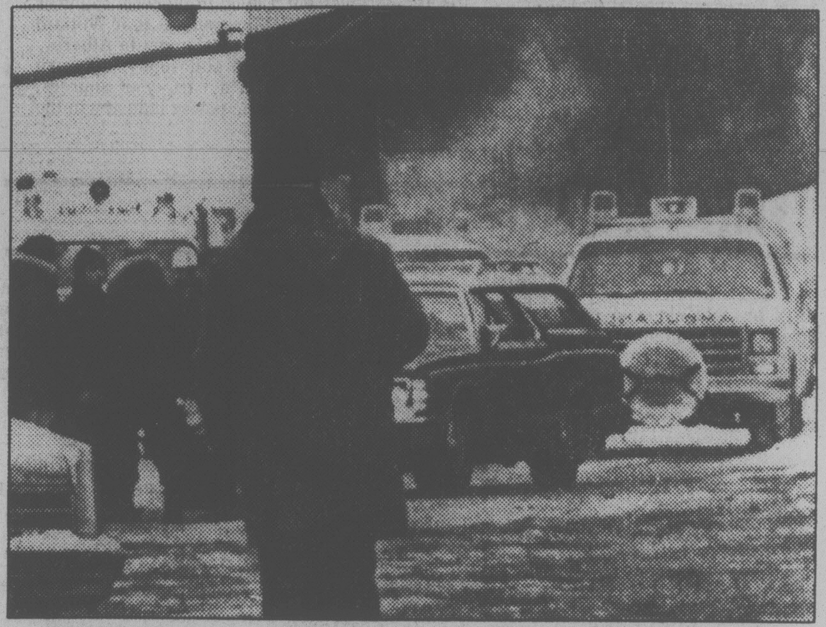
He said Bennett's insistence on a two-river hydro power scheme has proven to be, despite all the criticism over the years, the right decision and one from which B.C. will reap enormous benefits for decades to come.

Long-time colleague Waldo Skillings, former trade and industry minister, said he had lost a wonderful friend, and said the contributions Bennett made will last for years.

"He brought B.C. from a have-not province to one of the foremost provinces in Canada."

Former Victoria mayor Peter Pollen called Bennett "one of the greatest, if not the greatest political figure in B.C.'s history."

Fatal Blast Rips N.S. Coal Mine



Rescue vehicles at Glace Bay colliery after tragic blast

GLACE BAY, N.S. (UPC) — Ten miners were confirmed dead and six others were critically injured when a blast ripped through the 12th level of a coal mine here early today, Cape Breton Development Corp. officials said.

"This morning at approximately 5 a.m. AST (1 a.m. PST) an ignition occurred at the No. 26 collery followed immediately by an explosion," said a statement released by Cape Breton Development, a federal Crown-owned company.

Officials of the firm, also known as Devco, said the cause of the blast at the mine, located about 400 kilometres northeast of Halifax, was not known. However, observers say it looked as though a pocket of methane gas had ignited.

The statement said no one was trapped in the mine, but resumption of mining was not expected to begin for several days.

The names of the victims were being withheld pending notification of next-of-kin.

Six miners suffering burns arrived by ambulance late this morning at Victoria General Hospital in Halifax, assistant nursing director Doris McMaster said.

"All burns are critical but we have been told some are more severely burned than the others," she said. "It is too early to say what their condition is now. Examinations have not yet been made."

Miss McMaster said the injured men, travelling with medical attendants, "made good time in getting here" despite winter road conditions.

Nova Scotia Mines Minister Ron Barkhouse, expected to arrive at the site this afternoon, issued a statement expressing official regret:

"Once again (it) clearly brings to all of us the dedication and service that our coal miners give to the province."

Price of Food Up 21% in Year

OTTAWA (CP) — Hefty increases in the price of beef, flour and fresh produce pushed food prices up 3.1 per cent in the four-week period ended Feb. 15, the Anti-Inflation Board reported Friday.

The board said the survey of supermarket prices in 12 cities showed food prices now are 21 per cent higher than a year ago, the highest annual increase since the index was created in 1974.

The board said the average price for a nutritious diet for a family of four jumped to $58.84 in mid-February, up $1.80 from the January level and $8.30 higher than February, 1978.

The 21-per-cent increase in the board's food basket compares with a 14.1-per-cent annual increase in food prices shown in the January consumer price index issued by Statistics Canada.

Am AIB spokesman said the difference is a result of Statistics Canada changing the weighting of foods in its index last year. The board uses the old index.

The board said beef prices jumped 9.7 per cent in the month, 62.6 per cent above prices a year earlier.

Fresh fruit jumped 5.6 per cent in the month and prices of fresh vegetable were up 4.6 per cent, the board said.

"Prices for fresh produce vary sharply as sources or supply shift and as weather conditions change," the board said. "Orange, apple, grapefruit, carrots and cabbage were among the items showing significant price rises."

Lettuce dropped slightly while pootatoes and apples — which have among the heaviest weights in the index — showed only minor price changes.

The board said cereal and bakery products prices rose 1.9 per cent during the month and were up 16.4 per cent over a year earlier.

The board said poultry prices rose .9 per cent during the latest month and were up 33.5 per cent from a year earlier. Chicken was up 1.4 per cent because of increased consumer demand in he face of rapidly-rising beef prices.

The survey showed prices of processed fruit were up 2.1 per cent last month, up 34.3 per cent for the year. Fish was up 3.4 per cent for the month, 12.4 per cent for the year.

Dairy products rose .7 per cent during the month, up 7.8 per cent over the year and eggs rose .5 per cent to prices 8.8 per-cent higher than a year earlier.

Pork prices were up .9 per cent for the month and were up 10.9 per cent from a year earlier. The board said increased demand for pork had pushed up prices.

Beverage prices rose only .3 per cent during the month and were 2.2 per cent lower than a year ago mainly because of drops in coffee and tea prices.

More 'Punishment' For Vietnam: China

Times News Services

Tank-led Chinese forces, firing the most intense artillery barrages in the history of Indo-Chinese warfare, were reported today to have driven 20 miles into Vietnam. But intelligence sources said counterattacking Vietnamese may have pushed the Chinese back at some points.

Intelligence sources in Bangkok said the Chinese invaders had captured at least four provincial capitals along the 450-mile border. A Japanese report said a fifth captial had fallen, but the Vietnamese denied this.

At the same time a Peking official quoted by a Japanese news dispatch said Chinese forces — once they finished "punishing" Vietnam — would pull back to the border recognized only by Peking and not by Hanoi.

Kyodo news service quoted the official, whose name was withheld, as saying "the border line to which the Chinese forces would pull out is the one recognized by China, not the border claimed by the Vietnamese."

The official ruled out the possibility that the Chinese would withdraw from Vietnamese territory "today or tomorrow," the dispatch said. He added that "Vietnam should receive punishment for a little more time."

Newsmen familiar with Indochina warfare and weaponry in recent years agreed the Chinese artillery barrage on the northwestern villae off Dung Ho alone hit a rate of at least a round every second for long spurts Friday.

In Moscow, Defense Minister Dmitry Ustinov said Friday that Moscow's warning to China to stop before "it is too late" should not be taken lightly and cautioned that Soviet armed forces are combat- ready.

But the Kremlin still has failed to indicate what if anything it proposes to do to counter the Chinese action.

Moscow has not even acknowledged reports from Washington that the Soviet Union has stepped up deliveries of military supplies to Vietnam, with the departure Friday of six AN-22 transport planes for Hanoi.

At the United Nations, western and non-aligned members of the UN Security Council are looking for an acceptable formula that would halt the fighting in Indochina and use the good offices of the secretary-general to set up a peace mission.

Canada asked to be heard in the council debate today.

Bomb Alert In Britain After Blasts

YEOVIL, England (Reuter) — England went on a bomb alert today after blasts shattered the peace of this western country town and Irish republican guerrillas said they were responsible.

Four persons were injured, one severely, when the first blast came without warning in a crowded Woolworth store. As shoppers fled into the streets, another bomb, planted in a parked van, rocked the area.

That blast caused no injuries but turned the van, in a town centre parking lot, into a heap of smouldering metal.

Army experts destroyed two more devices with controlled explosions and defused a third planted in a supermarket.

In Dublin, spokesmen for the violent Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) phoned newspapers and said republican guerrillas were responsible for the attack.

Police here said a man in his 20s has been detained in connection with the blasts.

The blasts came hours after Roy Mason, minister in charge of Northern Ireland, warned that the IRA might be planning a new bombing campaign in Ulster.

Last month, police arrested a dozen men after IRA attacks on the British mainland in which bombs exploded in hired cars in London and a big gas-storage tank was blown up southeast of the capital.

There is no indication why the bombers chose this sleepy Somerset town for their attack. But recently security has been greatly stepped up in London and there was speculation the IRA would look for softer targets.

Police throughout the country have been put on alert this weekend in case of further attacks.

$100-a-Week Raises To Senior Bureaucrats

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans to give 2,000 senior civil servants pay raises of up to $100 a week — to a top range of $78,700 a year.

In a news release delivered Friday at the close of business, the federal treasury board said executive-level bureaucrats would receive seven-per-cent pay increases this year.

That boosts the maximum pay to deputy ministers by about $100 a week to $1,500 weekly. Minimums at the lowest executive level would increase about $42 to about $650 a week.

The government said it had considered a recommendation from an outside advisory group for a 7.5-per-cent increase in salaries but decided on seven per cent because "current economic circumstances required continued restraint."

Last year, the government said it expected wage increases in the private sector not to exceed six per cent.

Prime Minister Trudeau this year received a 6.4-per-cent pay increase — as did all MPs — bringing his salary to $76,700 annually. Governor-General Edward Schreyer receives $48,000 while Opposition Leader Joe Clark and cabinet ministers get $62,500.

Wage Hike Headline Clarified

In the headline of the main front page story in Friday's Times, the reference to "56 per cent wage hikes" was not clear to some readers.

To clarify, the figure was based on the third and fourth paragraphs of the story which referred to average weekly industrial wages rising virtually twice as fast as profits which had risen 28.7 per cent in the same period. The 56 per cent figure was not given specifically in the story as it should have been.

Here's an effective design for place mats

It's Ideal Time to Have a Project

By MAY E. MacLEAN

KNIT AND CHAT

A couple of weeks ago I referred to the period between the New Year and spring as the winter doldrums and many of you have written thanking me for my suggestions.

This is a good time of year to have a project such as knitting, crocheting an afghan, making a pieced or applique quilt or spring clothes.

Some of us are lucky and get a winter holiday. But for many, winter evenings can be long. Many of you have written about macrame and hairpin lace. Have you tried the library for craft books? I think you'll be pleasantly surprised at the books on crafts.

Macrame is the art of decorative knotting and I have two good patterns if you would like this craft. Macrame Three has instructions for several plant holders and a cut bird feeder. Macrame Hacienda has wall hangings, cushions, place mats, lampshades and rugs. Both books have diagrams of the knots used so that you will have no problems. All you need is time and patience.

As these books are large they need an 8½ by 11-inch stamped envelope and are $1 each. If you don't have the right size envelope, remit an extra 30 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address.

Hairpin lace and tatting are very old crafts. A loom and crochet hook are used for hairpin lace. The loom varies in width depending upon the laciness desired for the over—all effect. A book with illustrations will help you learn the basic stitch easily.

Tatting is worked with a shuttle. It is also a form of knotting over a loop which is formed and held in the left hand.

If you would like to learn the basic stitches of crochet my leaflet No. 6879 Learn to Crochet will be helpful. It gives complete diagrams of the hands, yarn and hook step by step.

The leaflet also has directions for left-handed people.

This week's pattern is a crochet trolley cloth or place mat. Worked in firm motifs which are assembled into the shape and size you require. This design is effective and attractive.

To order Leaflet No. 7951 or any other pattern mentioned, send 75 cents for patterns or $1 for macrame

Lazy Eye Worth Check

My son's teacher called to tell me that she thinks he has a "lazy eye" and that is why he doesn't learn as well as other children in the class. Can anything be done to correct this condition? He is six and seems like a perfectly normal, healthy boy.—Mrs. N.L.

Dear Mrs. L.:

Your son's teacher is one of those many dedicated educators who closely observe the talents and the potential of their children. Many teachers all over America are responsible for making astute observations about their pupils, observations that may often be missed by parents themselves.

A "lazy eye" may be only one of the many conditions that should be thoroughly investigated in order to completely understand your son's progress is poor at school.

There are, indeed, physical reasons for such impaired progress. There also may be psychological reasons, and even neurological conditions which adversely affect the child.

There is a technical condition known as "amblyopia," which is commonly overlooked and which, unfortunately, cannot readily be reversed if the condition persists for a long time. Children with normal eyes focus on an image with both eyes. The images are brought to the brain. There the images from the two eyes fuse and become one. This known as "binocular vision."

When, because of a "lazy" eye or other condition, these images do not fuse and become one, children develop double vision. This double vision is probably one of the most important and frequently overlooked reasons for poor learning, poor coordination and inablility to keep up with school work.

Children whose eyes are crossed due to a muscle imbalance are frequently referred to as having a "lazy eye" which may be responsible for amblyopia.

The fact that the teacher suspects a lazy eye does not, of course, mean that your son has it. Nevertheless, you should follow through with a complete eye examination. For the early discovery of amblyopia offers the greatest chance for correction.

Dear Miss H.:

Your friend may be a good friend, but she obviously doesn't know that the removal of hair by X-ray is dangerous and has actually been totally condemned by the medical profession and by specialists in radiology. In fact, there are specific laws in most states that prohibit the use of X-rays for this purpose.

There are many excellent methods for removing hair that are not dangerous. Electrolysis, waxing techniques and certain chemical depilatories are safe and usually effective.

GEM SOCIETY

EVERYTHING YOU'VE ALWAYS WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT JEWELRY . . .

In my 33 years in the jewelry business I've been asked many questions about jewelry and gemstones, questions you may have had but never gotten around to inquiring about. Here are just a few.

What is the most common gemstone?

The most common gemstone is quartz, which is made up of the two most abundant elements on earth, silicon and oxygen. In the gem world, quartz takes many varied forms: rose quartz, smoky quartz, the lovely yellow citrine, the rich purple amethyst, colorless rock crystal, and silky brown tiger's eye, just to name a few.

What's the most valuable gem next to diamond?

Well, actually, diamond is not necessarily the most valuable gem. Diamond, ruby, emerald and alexandrite in their finest qualities are all at the top of the scale. But the range of qualities in which gemstones occur is so great that no one of these is always more valuable than another.

Do gemstones ever naturally exhibit a star or are star gems all-man-made?

Yes, some natural gemstones do exhibit a star effect, known as asterism. Star rubies and saphires are probably the best known of the asteriated stones, but there is also star garnet and star quartz and other star stones. The star is caused by the reflection of light from tiny needle-like inclusions which intersect at specific angles within the stone. Over twenty years ago, man succeeded in synthesizing star stones in the laboratory. This is probably the "man-made" material you're thinking of, since the stones were highly publicized.
